

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Public Galleries.—A further portion of the large Sculptures in the Egyptian Gallery has been fixed on polished granite pedestals, and explanatory titles have been painted on these, and on other pedestals of Sculptures.

The Etruscan, Greek, and Roman Sepulchral Monuments have been collected in one of the rooms of the Basement; a Columbarium has been there fitted up for the reception of the Roman Cinerary Urns; and considerable progress has been made in the arrangement of the entire collection, on a system intended to illustrate the different modes of Sepulture.

The Bronzes and Ivories from Nimrúd have been transferred to new table cases in the Assyrian Gallery.

Two cargoes of Assyrian Antiquities, the first brought by the Christiana Carmel, the second by the Manuel, the result of excavations carried on by Mr. Rassam, Mr. Loftus, and Mr. Taylor, under the directions of Lieut.-Colonel Sir H. C. Rawlinson, K.C.B., have been received and unpacked, and the Sculptures arranged partly in one of the rooms of the Basement, and partly in a small room adjoining the Nimrúd Side Gallery, for temporary exhibition during the erection of the new apartment ordered for their reception.

The large Sculptures from the Pediments of the Parthenon have been transferred to the New Greek Room, and some progress has been made in the re-arrangement of the other Athenian Monuments in this and the Elgin Room.

A collection of Greek Sepulchral Stelæ, obtained from the Russian Museum of Kertch, and presented by the War Department, has been arranged in the Sepulchral Basement Room.

The Anglo-Roman Sculptures and Mosaics have been re-arranged in the Roman Gallery, which has been ornamentally painted.

102 tablets have been catalogued.
205 objects have been mounted.

46 tablets

Digitized by Google

46 tablets have been framed and glazed.
5 papyri have been unrolled.
11 pieces of papyri have been cleaned and mounted.
16 papyri have been framed and glazed.
237 labels have been printed.

(b) In the other collections:—

57 Assyrian objects have been mounted.
272 Assyrian bronze objects have been re-mounted.
124 British objects have been mounted.
36 Vases, chiefly Greek, have been repaired.

Medal Room.—During the past year the arrangement of the Greek series of Coins has been improved, particularly in the case of the Coins of the Nomes of Egypt. The arrangement of the Roman Gold Coins has been also improved, and the Copper coinage of the Roman families is in process of re-arrangement in accordance with the latest discoveries. The arrangement of the Oriental Coins has been rendered more perfect, and some portions of the series have been classed afresh. It has been thus necessary to write many new cards for the interior of the cabinets, and labels for the exterior.

The unascertained Coins comprised in the collection have been carefully studied, and the proper attributions of several of them determined.

In addition to the examination of the various Coins and Medals offered for purchase, a large collection, recently discovered, of Roman Third Brass Coins has been carefully examined, and all the specimens needed for the Museum selected.

B. Coins and Medals.—The following table shows the number, and classification, of the acquisitions under this head:—

	Gold.	Silver.	Copper.
Greek	10	87	133
Roman	129	18	147
Byzantine	3	1	19
Oriental	24	46	132
Mediæval and Modern	54	328	499
	220	480	930	= 1,630

To these must be added five Cufic Glass Coins. Of these, 652 remain unregistered. Mr. Roach Smith's Collection of London Antiquities comprises a large number of Roman Coins, which, with the exception of two included in the above enumeration, it is proposed to place with the Antiquities, either as duplicates of examples in the Medal Room, or as too ill preserved for the Numismatic series.

The Sardinian Collection formed by Signor Cara likewise contains a considerable number of Greek, Roman, and Byzantine Coins, which will be treated in the same manner as those just mentioned, for the same reasons.

These two collections are therefore excluded from the enumeration given above.

The acquisitions of the past year, though less numerous than in some former years, comprise an unusual number of examples of the highest importance.

In the Greek series the following Coins may be specified:—A Pentadrachm, or, possibly, Medallion, of Hieronymus, King of Syracuse, of extreme rarity; a Didrachm of Lete in Macedonia, presenting a new variety of type; three fine Tetradrachms of the Kings of Bithynia; a Hemidrachm of Pixodarus, King of Caria, of a new type; a fine Cistophorus of Laodicæa in Phrygia; a Tetradrachm of Antiochus the Great, King of Syria, struck in Bactriana; three Tetradrachms of Euthydemus, one of Antimachus, and one of Demetrius, severally, Kings of Bactriana: the last of these is believed to be unique. The series of Greek Coins struck under Roman government has been enriched by the purchase of 66 Copper Coins of Alexandria in Egypt, in the finest preservation, including an unpublished one of Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus, one of Julia Paula, Annia Faustina, Julia Mæsa and Tranquillina respectively, and two of Gordianus I., Africanus.

The most important addition to the Roman series has been made in the purchase of 116 Aurei taken from a larger number found in the Regency of Tunis. All these, excepting one, which was selected on account of its rarity as a "restored coin," are in the highest possible condition. Among them may be specified, on account of their rarity, ten Aurei of Commodus, and five of Crispina; and, for their great beauty, many of those of Antoninus Pius, and of the two Faustinas. Among the Roman Gold Coins acquired may be also particularised an Aureus of Tetricus and his son, believed to be unique, and another of Maximianus I., struck at London. The most important additions to the Copper series are an unique third brass coin of Carausius, with a full-faced portrait; and 77 specimens of Coins of the same class, struck during the reign of Constantine the Great, and his immediate successors, the result of the examination of a hoard lately found in Sussex.

The most valuable addition to the Oriental series is an ancient Persian Silver Coin of an extremely rare type, nearly resembling two already in the Collection which were procured from Mr. Rich. The Parthian series has also been improved; while to the Modern Oriental class considerable additions have been made, especially to the cabinets of Ommiade, Georgian, Persian, Tunisian, and Cufic glass money.

The additions to the Mediæval and Modern part of the Collection comprise many important coins. The series of Ostrogoths in Italy, Visigoths in Spain, and Vandals of Carthage, have been improved. To the Spanish Coins have been added four in Gold, two of Henry III. of Castile, and two of John II. of Arragon; and to the Belgian, several coins of the Bishops of Liege, from the tenth to the thirteenth century. The Swiss Collection has been greatly improved, especially by the gift, by F. de Salis, Esq., of a large Gold Coin of Ulrich von Federspiel, Bishop of Coire (1692–1728), a Gold Testoon of the Canton Lucerne, and a Silver Coin of Gubert de Salis, all rare, and the second extremely so. A Denier and Obole of Bishop Conrad of Geneva (1038), of the greatest rarity, have been acquired by purchase. In the Italian series may be specified a rare Coin of Como; and additions of importance to the Coins of Naples and Sicily, to the Papal money, particularly a Silver Coin of Clement VII. by Benvenuto Cellini, to the money of Savoy, and to that of Venice. In the German series, the Coins of the Dukes of Bohemia, of the City and Archiepiscopate of Cologne, of the Archiepiscopate of Treves, and of the Teutonic Order, have received valuable additions.

The English Collection has been enriched by the acquisition of Mr. Roach Smith's series of London Tokens.

 The number of visitors to the Medal Room from Christmas 1855 to Christmas 1856 has been 2,299, showing an increase of 853 on the number of the preceding year.

Natural History Departments.

All the collections of Natural History are in a good state of preservation.

To the extent to which present space admits the several Classes are arranged as wholes; so as to enable the student and observant visitor to appreciate the extent of the Class, and to trace the kind and order of the variations which have been superinduced upon its common or fundamental characters.

The Class of Birds, the Collection of Shells, the Insects, the Reptiles, both recent and fossil, the Fishes, both recent and fossil, and the Minerals, are thus allocated, not only according to Orders, Families, and Genera, but with a view to impart instruction as to the extent, the range of variety, and the progression of affinities of the subordinate groups of those Classes respectively.

With regard to the other Classes subdivided according to the separate apartments allotted to them, a natural division of the Class is appropriated as far as possible to each.

The instruction of Visitors has been duly regarded in the position and arrangement of the Specimens, and by attaching, in conspicuous positions, plain definitions of the natural groups of each Class, and of the several Species and Varieties exemplified.

The annual ratio of the additions to the several departments of the Natural History is an increasing one. 33,769 specimens have been added to the Zoological Series, and 6,700 specimens to the collections of Geology and Mineralogy, in the course of the year 1856. The details of these additions are given in the Annual Reports of the Keepers of those departments.

Amongst the additions to the Class Mammalia the recently discovered species of Bornean Orang-utan (Pithecus Morio), which differs in the more open facial angle, and some other characters, from the previously known species (Pithecus Satyrus), is one of peculiar interest to both the Naturalist and Ethnologist. The small South American quadruped called Chlamyphorus truncatus, figured in Dr. Buckland's "Bridgewater Treatise, as exemplifying some of the peculiarities of the Megatherium is a rare and valuable acquisition. The bird from the middle island of New Zealand, called Notornis Mantelli, first indicated by fossil remains found associated with those of the great Dinornis, is now exemplified, in the Gallery of Ornithology, by the well preserved specimen of the only example of the living bird captured in that island, the skin of which has been sent to England. The entire skeleton of the Dinornis Elephantopus—the last discovered and rarest species of the Moas, or great wingless birds, of New Zealand, now exhibited in the Gallery of Fossils, well exemplifies the general characters of these apparently extinct birds, and the singularly massive proportions of the present unique example of the genus.

Richard Owen,
Superintendent of the Departments of Natural History.

Zoological Department.

The Collections of Vertebrated Animals and Shells which are exhibited in the Rooms open to the Public have been cleaned and re-arranged according to modern improvements in Zoology.

The very extensive Collection of Skeletons of Vertebrated Animals and the Specimens of the Vertebrated, Molluscous, Annulose and Radiated Animals in spirits, have been also cleaned, re-arranged, and re-labelled, where the labels had been destroyed by dust or damp. The Stuffed Skins in store have been examined and verified.

The General Collection of Insects and Crustacea have had large accessions of Specimens made to them, which have been arranged in their appropriate systematic places, and several parts of these Collections have been entirely re-arranged and described.

The whole of these Collections are arranged in a more strictly systematic manner, and more uniformly named, in accordance with the modern state of science, than any of the Public Collections in Europe, as is universally allowed by all the foreign naturalists who come to visit them.

During the year 1856 there have been added to the several parts of the Zoological Collection 33,769 specimens of the different classes of animals, viz.:

Vertebrated Animals	2,735
Mollusca and Radiata	14,542
Annulose Animals	16,492
Total	33,769

Of these, a very considerable proportion of the specimens are types of the species described in various scientific works and periodicals, independently of a very large number of specimens that have been described during this year in the publications of the Museum itself, and which are thus rendered of typical importance.

These 33,769 specimens, which have been acquired during the year, have been all regularly marked and described in the Manuscript Register of Accessions, with an account from whom, whence, and how they were derived, which adds greatly to their value, and they have all been arranged in their systematic places in the General Collection, and properly labelled.

2. A Guide to the Collection of Mollusca, by Dr. J. E. Gray.
3. A Catalogue of the Apodal Fish, by Dr. Kaup.
4. A Catalogue of the Orthopterous Insects, with figures of all the new species, by J. O. Westwood, F.L.S., V.P.E.S.

In addition to the several thousand Fish, Reptiles, Mollusca, Insects, Crustacea, and other smaller animals that are prepared in the Museum, there have been set up and re-set by the animal preserver—

Mammalia	29
Birds	166
Reptiles	7
Fish	43
Skeletons and Skulls	87
Insects	3,560

In addition to the Collections which have been purchased, on account of their being the types described, the specimens added have been selected from large collections from different countries which have been offered for sale, as those which were most required to complete the series, best leading to illustrate the scientific arrangement, and as most useful in showing the habits and economic uses of the animals.

The following additions may be specially noticed:

Department of Geology and Mineralogy.

During the past year the number of specimens added to this Department is about 6,700. Of remains of Vertebrate Animals, the above-mentioned number includes upwards of 3,000 specimens, made up in great part of a very extensive collection of Fossil Bones of various species of Birds and other Animals from New Zealand, collected with great care by Mr. Commissioner Mantell. These Specimens have all been catalogued, and will therefore now be displayed (so far as the crowded state of the Gallery will permit) with as little delay as possible. One of the most remarkable objects in the Collection is the gigantic Bird named Dinornis elephantopus, by Professor Owen, a specimen of which has been mounted and is exhibited in the Sixth Room.

The acquisitions of Fossil Shells and other Invertebrate Animals amount to about 3,500 specimens. Of these a considerable portion has been catalogued, together with a still larger number of specimens previously procured, the total number of specimens labelled and entered being about 5,000. These catalogued specimens have been carefully examined, mounted on tablets, and arranged in the cases. They consist of newer Pliocene Shells from Britain, Sweden, and Sicily; newer Tertiary Shells, &c. of Porto Santo and the Canaries; Eocene Tertiary Shells; Cretaceous, Oolitic, Triassic, and Palæozoic Fossil Shells and Corals; and about 40 species of Fossil Crustaceans, and 70 species of Echinodermata.

The Mineral Collection has been increased by 200 specimens, consisting partly of new species, but chiefly of very choice and fine examples, and new varieties of species already possessed, all of which have been catalogued and arranged. Among the purchased specimens may be more particularly noticed some fine examples of a new variety of Wavellite, specimens of Dichroite, Chiastolite, Allanite, and Molybdates of Lead, with various other Lead Ores from North America; an interesting example of Laminated Native Silver from Mexico; Chrysocolla and other Minerals (chiefly volcanic) from Lipari and Rocca-Monfina; a large specimen of Rose-coloured Calcareous Spar, from the Cobalt Mines of Riegelsdorf, Hesen; a very large Rock-Crystal, enclosing doubly terminated Crystals of the same substance, and containing, moreover, Water and detached Crystals of Pyrites, said to be from Madagascar; and a large and finely crystallized specimen of Stilbite, from Australia. Among the donations to this branch of the Collection, the following may be particularized: A portion of a mass of Meteoric Iron, from Madoc, Upper Canada, presented by Sir William E. Logan, F. R. S., &c.; a fine specimen of Pectolite, from Landellsfoot, Ayrshire, presented by Dr. Heddle; specimens of Sulphate of Lead and Carbonate of Lime, from Sardinia, presented by M. Barbetti; and a series of Minerals, from the Antimony Mines of Hiera, Mytilene, presented by Charles T. Newton, Esq., Her Majesty's Vice-Consul, Mytilene. The chief additions by donation to the Collection of Fossils are, a Skull of the Musk Ox, from the "Drift," at Maidenhead, Berkshire, presented by John Lubbock, Esq.; a small series of remains of a Fossil Elephant from Asia Minor, presented by J. M. Geils, Esq.; 150 specimens of newer Tertiary Fossils from Porto-Santo, presented by Sir Charles Lyell, F. R. S., &c.; a series of Graptolites, from Scotland, presented by Professor Harkness; specimens of Entomostraca, by T. R. Jones, Esq., and Foraminifera, by W. K. Department of Prints and Drawings.

The Drawings by the old Masters framed and exhibited during 1855, and a portion of 1856, have been replaced by a fresh selection.

The Collection of Engravings by Marc' Antonio is in the course of re-arrangement; about one-third has been carefully mounted in such a manner as will secure the surface from the chance of future injury from friction.

The Works of John Matham have been arranged in four volumes.

The Etchings of Adrian Ostade have been re-arranged, which step became necessary in consequence of the valuable accessions made within a short period of many of the rarer states.

The Etchings of Carl Russ and Martin S. Schmidt have been arranged in a volume.

Eighty-five of the choicer Drawings have been remounted in such a manner as to secure the surface from injury by friction.

Seven thousand two hundred and thirty-five articles have been entered in the register of purchases and presentations; each article has had the register mark stamped on it.

* The stock held by the Commissioners has always been valued in these Accounts at the Prices on 20th November in each year. If those Prices be higher at one period than another, in the same degree will the value of the securities appear to be greater or less, and so of the Balance deficient. The prices of Stock on 20th November 1855 and 20th November 1856 were as follows:

	1855.	1856.
Consolidated 3 per Cents. - - - - - - - - -	88 ⅜	93 ⅛

Upon this principle the Balance deficient on 20th November 1856 is made to appear.

Note.—There were not any Exchequer Bonds bought or paid off during the year ending 20 November 1856.

On Account of the Fund for the Banks for Savings in Ireland.

The surplus monies paid in to the Bank of Ireland by savings banks in Ireland not required in Ireland for payment to savings banks are from time to time remitted to the Commissioners' account at the Bank of England, "Savings Banks in Great Britain," and form part of the general balance at that account, from which all Stock or Exchequer Bills are purchased.

ONGAR BRANCH OF ROMFORD SAVINGS BANK.

Ongar Branch of Romford.

Dear Sir, Cranham Rectory, Romford, Essex, November 1851.

BY request of the trustees and managers of the Romford Savings Bank, I had an interview with you respecting our bank on Friday, 1 March 1850, when you were so kind as to give us much valuable information.

I am requested now to address you on a most unpleasant subject of recent occurrence.

On Thursday the 7th instant, Thomas Stockwell Richardson, of Chipping Ongar, our actuary there, absconded; this became known to the resident managers on the following day, when an immediate search was made on his premises, and a paper found, stating, among his other liabilities, one to the bank for 700*l.* A warrant for his apprehension was immediately obtained, and placed in the hands of an active London detective policeman, but hitherto without success. An investigation is now in progress, from which it appears probable that the total defalcation will amount to about 600*l.*; this is divisible into two distinct classes:—

1. Money received by the bank in due course, and for which we therefore consider ourselves responsible.
2. Money indiscreetly entrusted to the actuary for investment, and by him purloined.

With respect to Class 1, his artifices were such as to elude the vigilance of the managers; such, for instance, as carefully erasing figures, and altering the sum total, between the time of the manager signing the accounts of receipts and payments, at the close of office hours, and the application of the cashier to the actuary for the money in hand, when he always found it to correspond with the supposed certified entries in the day-book. This is only one out of several of his artifices. The deficiency under this class will be found to be of small amount.

Under Class 2 the deficiency is large. Richardson has sedulously obtained the confidence of the depositors, and induced them to entrust their money to him individually for deposit, in direct contravention of Rule 4, which provides that "one member of the committee shall attend in rotation at the office on every Wednesday, from twelve to two o'clock, to superintend and affix his signature to receipts and payments; without which no transaction will be considered binding on the institution."

If the depositors required the usual signature in the deposit book, he affixed the initials T. R.; there being a manager, the initial of whose surname was R., no doubt misled them.

Some little delay has arisen in the investigation, owing to the difficulty of obtaining the depositors' books; we propose that as soon as that shall be completed, a small deputation of trustees and managers shall wait upon you by appointment, to lay before you the result, and to give every explanation in their power.

Richardson is a man of very acute intelligence, and has probably used every means which could be devised for his dishonest purposes; this will serve as a most useful guide to us in framing such safeguards as may prevent the recurrence of so lamentable a catastrophe.

My only object in writing to you now, is to give you early intimation of what has occurred. You shall hear from me again as soon as it shall be in our power to give you more correct information of all particulars.

Yours, &c.

J. Tidd Pratt, Esq., National Debt Office,
London.

Sir, National Debt Office, 25 November 1851.

Mr. Pratt has placed in my hands your letter to him on the subject of the Ongar branch of the Romford Savings Bank, and of the conduct of Mr. Richardson as the actuary of that branch. I shall be glad to see you or any of the gentlemen connected with the bank, whenever it may appear to you and to them to be desirable, and you may rely upon receiving from this department every information and assistance which under the circumstances can be given. You, no doubt, recollect that there is deposited in this office a bond executed by Mr. Richardson, bearing date 5th May 1844, for 50 l., to which Mr. Francis Boyer, grocer of Chipping Ongar, is surety for the further sum of 50 l., which bond was considered to be good and valid by the trustees and managers on 18 December 1850, as appears by their certificate delivered to this office, and bearing that date.

Sir, Romford Savings Bank, 26 November 1851.

On the part of the trustees and managers, I beg to return you our most sincere thanks for your kind assurances of assistance. You may rely upon our making every exertion to save the depositors from loss. But unhappily for them, many of them intrusted their money to Richardson individually, and are therefore not within our protection respecting such money as was not placed in our hands.

I wrote to our solicitor, referring him to 3d Will. 4, c. 14, s. 28, as to priority of payment. I have seen him this morning, and he informs me that in consequence of my letter he has made diligent inquiries, and has learned that a solicitor solicitor in London is employed to collect a few debts for Richardson, and that probably some summonses will in consequence be issued for the appearance of the debtors at the next county court at Brentwood. Mr. North Surridge will therefore attend there to watch the proceedings, and if it shall appear that any money is then paid to Mr. Richardson's solicitor, he will apply to the judge to impound it under the circumstances then stated to him.

As an instance of the exertions which we are making, I will mention that we have received a depositor's book from Scotland for examination.

Mr. Boyer died in the summer; notice has been given to his executor that we shall have a claim upon his property.

We will give you the earliest information of the total deficiency as soon as we shall be able to ascertain it.

William Gibson, esq., of Ongar, solicitor, executor to Mr. Boyer, has requested us to furnish him with a copy of the bond in your hands; you will therefore oblige us by desiring copy to be forwarded to our cashier and solicitor, North Surridge, esq., Romford.

Sir, National Debt Office, 28 November 1851.

In compliance with the request contained in your letter of the 26th instant, I have the honour to transmit to you enclosed copy of the bond given by Mr. Thomas Stockwell Richardson and Mr. Francis Boyer for the good behaviour of the former in his office of assistant clerk in the Romford Savings Bank for the district of the hundred and neighbourhood of Ongar.

Extract of a Letter, dated 10 December 1857, from the Comptroller-General of the National Debt Office to the Trustees and Managers.

I observe that you propose to call a meeting of a selected number of the managers of the Romford Savings Bank to meet Mr. Pratt when he attends at Romford; I request, therefore, your permission to point out that such a course would be open to various objections, and might give rise to grave questions hereafter. I would suggest to you that the whole of the trustees and managers should be summoned, and there can be no doubt you would secure the attendance of those who take the principal share in the management.

I am, &c.
Rev. T. Ludbey, Romford. (signed) A. Y. Spearman.

Dear Sir, Cranham Rectory, Romford, 24 December 1851.

Mr. J. Tidd Pratt has no doubt informed you of the result of our meeting at Romford.

It was then decided that public notice by advertisement, and particular notice to individual depositors, should forthwith be given, stating that Mr. J. Tidd Pratt will attend at Ongar on Saturday, the 3d of January next, when all depositors having disputed accounts are to appear before him, in order that he may decide upon the validity of their respective claims.

In the course of the discussion which ensued, Mr. Pratt enunciated one principle by which he should regulate his decisions upon certain claims, the nature of which was explained to him, and against which principle I then felt it my duty to protest, and which, from its vast importance, I will now lay before you, and trust that you will not consider me as trespassing unnecessarily upon your time and attention.

A depositor, at other than office hours, entrusted 30 l. to Mr. Richardson, the actuary or assistant clerk at Ongar, to deposit for him. Mr. Richardson entered the 30 l. in depositor's book, but did not pay in the money, nor enter it in the day-book, nor in any way bring it before the manager of the day, who consequently did not affix his signature, either in the depositor's book or in the day-book, to the payment of the money by the depositor to the bank, such payment never having, in fact, been made. Some weeks afterwards, when, in pursuance of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 83, s. 5, this depositor produced his book at the institution for examination, a manager compared the deposit-book with the ledger, and found them to correspond, such ledger having, as it appears, been prepared for that especial purpose. The manager affixed his signature in the deposit-book accordingly, thereby signifying its several contents, including the now disputed 30*l.*, to be correct. The entry of 30*l.* was afterwards erased with a knife, as may be seen upon examining the ledger. It still remains in the depositor's book, but never was in the day-book.

Mr. Tidd Pratt says, that the deposit-book having, as above stated, been examined and compared with the purposely-prepared ledger, and by the manager certified to be then correct, such signature renders the bank liable for the 30*l.*, although the amount was never invested; upon the same principle, as he says, that if your banker makes a false entry in your accounts, and copies the same into your own bank-book, without your then discovering the error, and you again send your book to be entered up without noticing the error, after such oversight, you can have no claim upon your banker for redress. Upon this doctrine I will make no other observation than that I should be very sorry to be assured that it is correct. But against Mr. T. Pratt's opinion as to the liability of the savings bank for the 30*l.*, I must again protest, on the following grounds:—

Our rules declare that "one member of the committee shall attend in rotation at the office, &c. to superintend and affix his signature to receipts and payments; without which no transaction will be considered binding on the institution. All money received shall be entered in the account books in the presence of the party paying the same."

The 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, s. 5, enacts that "all rules and regulations shall be binding on the several members and officers of the said institution, and the several depositors therein, and their representatives, all of whom shall be deemed and taken to have full notice thereof by such entry and deposit as aforesaid."

The payment by the depositor to Mr. Richardson at other than office hours, without any entry in the day-book, and without the signature or even the presence of any manager, was a manifest violation of the rules, thereby rendering the transaction illegal, and not binding on the institution; and the subsequent signature by a manager, certifying the accuracy of those accounts, which were falsely prepared for that special occasion, and afterwards altered, cannot legalize a transaction which before such signature was avowedly illegal. If it were really the law that one individual, thus artfully misled and deceived, could of his authority annul the enactments of a statute, and the rules founded upon that statute, the consequences must affect every bank in the kingdom to a most dangerous extent. Mr. Tidd Pratt is to decide as sole judge in these disputed cases, without any remedy by appeal. I hope, therefore, you will not deem me presumptuous in most earnestly intreating you to ask the opinion of some high authority upon this point, in order that the principle may be truly settled upon some sound foundation prior to the commencement of the proceedings at Ongar on Saturday, the 3d of January.

I feel most deeply anxious that the stability of the savings banks throughout the kingdom shall not be shaken, to which all must be exposed under circumstances similar to those I have stated above, if Mr. Pratt's doctrine shall be pronounced correct.

I remain, &c.
(signed) Thos. Ludbey.

I ought to say that the other trustees and managers have requested me to attend the meeting at Ongar as their representative, that I may watch the proceedings there on the part of the central bank at Romford.

Dear Sir, Cranham Rectory, Romford, 25 December 1851.

In my anxiety to conclude my letter of yesterday in time for the post, I omitted one circumstance of great importance.

Mr. Stokes, the cashier at Ongar, told Mr. T. Pratt that if his principle of liability were to be carried out, the savings bank would be rendered liable for nearly all the deficiency, although the money intended to be deposited had never been paid in, but only entrusted individually to Richardson, most of it not even on the day of business; to which Mr. Pratt replied, that if that should appear to be the case, our surplus fund having been very much reduced by our new building, and not sufficient, we must sell our new building to make good the deficiency, and if that should not be sufficient, we must pay off all the depositors by a per-centage, the same as in a case of bankruptcy; thus making use of the savings of the careful and industrious to liquidate the claims of those who have knowingly and wilfully violated the rules.

Pray excuse me for being so troublesome, but I feel very anxious for those who have in full confidence entrusted us with their little provision for future wants in sickness and old age.

Dear Sir, National Debt Office, 27 December 1851.

I have shown Mr. Pratt your letters of the 24th and 25th instant, and have communicated with him upon the subject therein referred to. It does not appear to me, I confess, that it is a matter in which the Commissioners are empowered to interfere. The law has expressly declared that in all cases of dispute which shall arise between depositors and trustees the barrister-at-law appointed under the Savings Bank Acts shall be the arbitrator, and it makes his award, order, and determination binding and conclusive on all parties, and final and without appeal. Mr. Pratt's award, whatever it may eventually be, will of course be made on his own view of the law, and of the facts in each case, as they shall be proved before him; and there can be no doubt that he will anxiously and carefully consider the whole of the facts and the law before he forms his ultimate judgment. If, however, it should appear in the course of the proceedings to be important to take the opinion of counsel upon any point of law affecting the case, I am confident Mr. Pratt will readily give you full opportunity for doing so before his final award shall be made in any of the cases which are to be submitted to him.

DUNMOW SAVINGS BANK.

Dunmow.

THE Trustees and Managers of the Savings Bank at Dunmow having, on 23d December 1851, requested that the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt would recommend a skilful accountant to investigate the accounts of the savings bank, the following reply was made to that communication:—

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 26 December 1851.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter of the 23d instant, requesting this office to recommend a skilful accountant to attend at your bank in order that the accounts may be clearly investigated by some competent person. You state that the trustees and managers have no reason to believe that the receipt and payment accounts are incorrect, but that it will be more satisfactory if that fact is ascertained on examination.

You are aware that it is not within the province of this department, under the existing law, to depute any person to visit a savings bank for this purpose, and that it is not therefore authorised to take any step for directing any such examination to be made as you contemplate, but I have communicated on the subject with Mr. Grey, of 48, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, who has been much employed in conducting examinations of the like kind at other banks, and I have ascertained that if you shall see fit to require his assistance, he will be ready on your application to him to afford it, by proceeding to Dunmow.

I have, &c.

The Trustees of the Savings Bank, Dunmow. (signed) A. Y. Spearman.

REPORT of Mr. Grey, the Accountant appointed by the Trustees and Managers to investigate the Accounts of the Savings Bank, in consequence of the Defalcation of the Actuary.

Gentlemen, Dunmow, 24 January 1852.

THE examination of the accounts of the Dunmow Savings Bank, with which you have entrusted me, has occupied more time than I expected, owing to the very imperfect state in which I found them.

In order to establish a foundation for the year's accounts which I was to examine, it was desirable to verify the annual statement made to the National Debt Office of the preceding year's accounts; and with this view I inquired for the details of the classified list of balances due to depositors contained in that former statement. This list shows the liabilities of the institution, and is therefore of the utmost importance: I was surprised, therefore, to be told that no such details were in existence, it having always been the practice to destroy them as soon as a summary had been made, and the account sent in!

My inquiries on this and other points have necessarily been directed to your clerk, Mr. Barfield, as I find that the office of secretary to your institution is entirely honorary; that it is held by the vicar of your parish, who is also a trustee and manager of the institution, and that you have yourselves acquiesced in his irresponsibility by appointing him without calling for the security you have required from the treasurer and clerk; to the latter of whom has been entrusted the duty of keeping the accounts without supervision or assistance of any kind.

The means of testing the accuracy of the classified list of balances of the former year having been destroyed, it became necessary that I should look the more closely into that showing the balances due on the 20th November 1851. The year's accounts to that day, as prepared by Mr. Barfield for the National Debt Office, purport to show a perfect general balance; and so do the accounts of all former years, back to 1838.

On checking the casting, however, of the different classes of the balances to November 1851, I have found material errors in four or five of them, to the amount of several hundred pounds, and in several instances the erroneous figures figures appear to me to have been altered from what they ought to be to what they are; that is, from right to wrong; and it therefore seems evident, that by such means the exact amount required for the general balance has been fictitiously made up.

Mr. Barfield tells me that he never understood this part of the account; and as I find that in one instance a balance of about 80*l.* stood for several years in duplicate on the books, and must therefore have been counted twice over in the classified lists of those years, it is quite clear that the required total must, on those occasions also, have been made up fictitiously.

Under these circumstances I have felt it necessary to examine most carefully every account that has been opened in the books of the bank since its establishment, in order to ascertain what accounts remain open, and what is the real amount of liabilities. This has been a work of some labour, because I found that about 20 years ago the accounts were in great confusion; that for several years most of the ledger entries were made with pencil only; and that although the accounts so posted which remained opened were afterwards copied with ink into another book, yet those which were closed during that period still remain only in pencil. Since Mr. Barfield became clerk, however, the ledger has been kept more regularly.

The next point on which I required information related to the interest paid or allowed to depositors during the year. The amount is stated in the account prepared for the National Debt Office at 538*l.* 8*s.* 6¼*d.* On inquiry for the particulars of this sum, which I concluded had been properly extracted from the ledger accounts (for unless this be done very carefully no true general balance can properly be made), Mr. Barfield informed me that he had never been able to do this, but had always assumed the amount paid as interest! An amount so taken has of course always varied from the truth; and judging from the account which I have myself made of the interest allowed in the last year, viz., 514*l.* 6*s.* 1*d.*, and comparing it with the amounts assumed, not only in the last but in former years also, I am led to the conclusion that a larger amount has always been assumed than has actually been paid or allowed to depositors. The effect of this over-statement would be to show a less amount of profit accruing to the bank than has actually been realised, to withhold from the surplus fund what has really belonged to it, and to make it appear that the gross amount due to depositors is greater than it really has been; and it is to meet this last effect that recourse has been had to a fictitious increase of the amount of the depositors' balances in order to arrive at a general balance.

This mode of mis-stating the account leaves open an almost unobservable door for fraud, as an amount equal to that overstated as paid for interest, if it could have been received from depositors out of bank hours (which the rules of the institution do not prohibit) might have been withheld from the funds of the bank without being missed.

I do not imagine that the course taken has been adopted with this design, or even that the full extent of the opportunity thus afforded has been perceived, but I am very sorry to add, that the occasion has not been altogether neglected. Two sums, one of 8*l.*, the other of 6*l.*, appear in the ledger as received on the 7th July 1851, but they are not to be found in the cash-book, and Mr. Barfield has acknowledged to me (in the presence of the treasurer and two of the managers) that he received the amounts out of bank hours, entered them in the depositors' books, and has since entered them in the ledger, but that he has never handed over the amount to any manager or to the treasurer.

These are the only sums so entered in the ledger in 1851, and Mr. Barfield assures me that, with the exception of 2*l.* similarly dealt with by him in 1842, there are no other sums which he has thus appropriated.

The truth of this assurance can only be thoroughly tested by examining the ledgers item by item with the cash-book, during the whole 20 years that they have been under Mr. Barfield's care, but I cannot recommend that such an expense should be incurred as this course would involve, because it is quite clear that no amount of any importance can have been withheld from the funds of the institution, the surplus fund having evidently been increasing during the last 10 or 12 years, and really presenting a larger amount at the present time than Mr. Barfield makes it appear.

I understand that the depositors' books were called in about two years ago, and that upwards of 600, out of 760 then outstanding, were produced, and found to agree with the ledgers; and although this step would not have discovered such frauds as I have described, because the ledger in the cases in question has been made to agree with the depositors' books, yet it does not appear that, up to that time, any liabilities were brought forward which were not entered in the ledger, and it may fairly be inferred, therefore, that the ledgers, whether they have been falsified or not, show all your liabilities.

The only further investigation I could suggest, would be an examination of the ledgers with the cash-book for one year further back, viz., from November 1849 to November 1850, so as to meet the point at which the examination of the depositors' books took place. But of the expediency of even this further step I must leave you to form your own judgment.

It is right to mention that two of the managers have, within the last few days, searched the ledgers of the institution for 20 years back for entries of money purported to have been paid in, to which no manager's signature is affixed in the ledger (according to your general practice), and although many such entries have been found, they appear to have been simply cases of omission, corresponding entries having invariably appeared in the cash-book, except in the three instances I have mentioned, in which Mr. Barfield acknowledges that he withheld the money.

I have myself taken off the balances of all the accounts open on the 20th November 1851, and I find that they agree with the classified lists made by Mr. Barfield, and add up according to my amended castings of those lists. They are in number 791, and their true amount is 18,469*l.* 0*s.* 8¾*d.*

I have checked every item entered in the ledger during the last year with the cash-book,—compared each day's transaction with the treasurer's books,—ascertained the whole amount received and paid during the year—the amount withdrawn from the National Debt Commissioners—the interest allowed by them—the interest allowed to depositors, and the expenses of management.

The assets at your disposal on the 20th November 1851 were 19,021*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.*, invested with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt (as appears by the debenture received from that office, which is before you), and a balance of 187*l.* 3*s.* 5½*d.* in the hands of your treasurer, forming a total of 19,208*l.* 9*s.* 0½*d.*, showing therefore a surplus or reserved fund of 739*l.* 8*s.* 3¾*d.* beyond the claims then standing against you.

There appears to be some irregularity in the mode of paying the expenses of management. I do not find that any book is kept at the bank of these payments; I have had to look for them in the treasurer's account. It appears to me that every demand for such expenses should be submitted, before it is paid, to a committee of managers to be held once or twice a year for the purpose, and not merely on the authority of the manager of the day under whose authority alone such payments should be made; a record also should be kept of them, independently of their appearance in the treasurer's account. I observe between 50 and 60 small balances remain on your books on accounts in which no transaction has taken place for 10 or 15, and in some instances for upwards of 20 years. The whole of these balances do not much exceed 20*l.* Many of them are the result of errors which occurred during the confused state of the ledgers, others are the amount of a bonus allotted in 1828 to all the then depositors, but not withdrawn by some of them. I should recommend you to close all these accounts, and to carry the balances to the profit of the institution, leaving it open at all times to reconsider any claims that may hereafter be made on them by the depositors.

You would thus relieve your books of a number of useless accounts, and your annual list of balances of a great repetition of figures.

There are also a few accounts which appear, in consequence of errors since discovered, to have been overdrawn many years ago; I should recommend that these also should be written off and closed.

In a few instances I see that more than 30*l.* has been received during a year from one depositor. You are of course aware of the illegality of this proceeding. It would be as well perhaps to caution the assisting managers against allowing a repetition of this practice.

It would assist the preparation of future annual statements if an account were kept of the interest paid during the year on closed accounts, as this amount must necessarily be taken into account, as well as that added half yearly to the open accounts, in order to make a correct general balance; and I beg beg to suggest that a column should be added to your cash-book, in which to show such interest separately from the principal.

I have ventured to prepare the heading of a yearly or half-yearly tabular sheet, which I would recommend should be kept of the proceedings of each day on which the bank is open. It contains every particular that it is useful to keep an account of, and shows the precise state of the accounts after each day's transaction.

National Debt Office, 18 April 1853.

Gentlemen,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, in which you state that a defalcation in the accounts of the actuary of your savings bank has been made known to you by him, and suggest that an inspector should be sent down by this department with all convenient dispatch.

The Commissioners, as you are aware, have no power under the existing law to investigate the accounts of the officer of a savings bank; that responsibility and duty are cast by the law upon the trustees of savings banks, and this department has no legal authority to interfere.

In order, however, to give you every assistance in their power, they have made inquiry whether Mr. Grey, an accountant of great respectability and in high repute, and who has already been very much engaged in such matters, was at liberty to go to Newport on your account, and at your expense; and having ascertained that he is able to do so, I have requested that he will proceed to-morrow to the Isle of Wight to put himself in communication with you. The terms of his engagement will of course be settled by you at the expense of the bank.

Gentlemen,

REFERRING to your letter to me of 16th April, and to my reply of the 18th of that month, relating to a defalcation in your savings bank, I have now to communicate to you the request of the Commissioners that you will be good enough to furnish them with a detailed statement of all the circumstances of the case.

It would appear from the report in the public papers that frauds to a very considerable extent have taken place, and have been systematically carried on by your late actuary for several years without detection, and the Commissioners would be glad therefore to learn what steps have been taken in the matter, and what arrangements you propose for the future.

It is perhaps entirely unnecessary for them to point out to you that no part of the funds of the depositors can legally be applied to defray the expense of any proceedings, which you may be advised to institute for the punishment of the party who may have committed the frauds.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 9 May 1853.

I HAVE the honour to request, in addition to the information called for by my letter of the 6th instant, you will be good enough to furnish the Commissioners with a copy of the report which may be made to you by the gentleman who has been engaged under your directions in examining into the accounts of your savings bank, in order that the Chancellor of the Exchequer may be prepared to answer any question which may be addressed to him in Parliament upon the subject.

68, High-street, Newport, Isle of Wight,
Sir, 10 May 1853.

IN reply to your favour of the 5th instant, I beg to say that a general meeting of the trustees and directors of the Isle of Wight Savings Bank has been this day held at the Guildhall in Newport, at which Mr. Grey's report on his examination of the books and papers of the bank was read.

A proposal was submitted to the meeting for the payment to the depositors of a dividend of 17 s. 6 d. in the pound, as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made for that purpose. It will be again brought before a more general meeting, on Monday next, of the magistrates, clergy, and others, who are invited to confer with the trustees and directors on the plans and regulations which may be considered advisable for the future management of the savings bank.

The directors have desired Mr. Grey to furnish you with a copy of his report; and if you wish for any other details than are contained in it, I shall be happy to supply them on being favoured with a letter from you to that effect.

I have, &c.

Sir A. Y. Spearman, Bart.

48, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London,
Gentlemen, 9 May 1853.

HAVING been appointed by you to investigate the accounts of the Isle of Wight Savings Bank, under the circumstances set forth in the letter addressed by you on the 16th April to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and in the reply sent to you on the 18th of the same month, of which copies, furnished to me by Sir Alexander Spearman, the Comptroller-general of that department, will be found at the close of this report, it becomes my duty to announce to you that I find a deficiency in the funds of your institution of 8,156 l. 1 s., a result which you will be quite prepared for by the disclosures and confessions which have been made by your late secretary.

With a view to ascertain from the most correct source the actual liabilities of the bank, I requested you to call in all the depositors' pass-books, and 2,257 of them have been placed in my hands, out of 2,646 which appear by the ledgers to have been outstanding.

I have carefully examined the pass-books so produced to me; they correspond with the ledger accounts, with one exception only; namely, the pass-book No. 6,524 contains an entry of 30 l. received in January last, which does not appear in the cash-book or ledger. I am told that this was a sum received by Mr. Pullen, the late secretary of the Ryde Branch of the bank, and not accounted accounted for by him, for which he was tried a short time since at Winchester, but a conviction could not be obtained.

This 30 l. remains as a liability against the bank, and forms a part of the deficiency I have named. You tell me, however, that a sum of 15 l. is due from the bank to Mr. Pullen, on account of salary, and that there is a prospect of recovering 15 l. more from his estate.

From the general accuracy of the accounts in the ledger, as compared with the pass-books produced, and from the circumstance that not a single pass-book has been produced for which there is no account in the ledger, I think I am justified in assuming that the remaining accounts in the ledger (of which the pass-books have not been produced) are equally correct; indeed it is not likely that they should be otherwise. The practice you have adopted since 1848, of comparing every pass-book which appeared after the close of each year, with a balance book prepared from the ledgers, made it necessary that there should be no discrepancy between them.

The balances due on the 2,257 pass-books produced, amount to 63,586*l.* 16*s.* 7*d.* Those due on the 389 not produced, amount to 3,191 l. 16 s. 3 d.; 52 of these, however, amounting to 1,227 l. 19 s. 8 d., are marked in the balance-book as having been examined by the directors since November last. Of the unclaimed accounts, 250 are under 1 l. each, and amount altogether to only 44 l. 5 s. 8 d. It is probable that many of these will never be claimed.

The whole amount of the 2,646 balances due to depositors, as they stand on the ledgers and pass-books, is 66,778 l. 12 s. 10 d.; whilst the available assets at your disposal (consisting of 58,008 l. 13 s. 2 d. invested with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and 613 l. 18 s. 8 d. in the hands of your treasurer) amount together to only 58,622 l. 11 s. 10 d., leaving the actual cash deficiency already mentioned of 8,156 l. 1 s.

I find that the house in which the business of the bank was carried on, and which was lately the residence of the secretary, was purchased out of the funds of the institution, and forms therefore a part of its assets. I can only judge of its present value by the fact that it is insured for 800*l.*; whatever it may hereafter produce will by so much diminish the present deficiency; but in the present state of the law I fear there will be some difficulty in selling this property and realising its value.

I have been permitted to inspect the balance sheets you have sent to the National Debt Office for the last 16 years; these have been prepared by your secretary, and signed by the trustees or directors. On closely examining that for the year ended the 20th of November last with the bank books, I find it incorrect in several particulars.

The classified statement of the balances which appear to be due to depositors, showing a total of 56,817 l. 18 s. 4 d., is altogether fictitious, the real amount due to depositors at that time having been 65,095 l. 5 s. 5 d.

Instead therefore of a surplus of the funds of the institution, which that account represented as then existing, there was at that time an actual deficiency of 8,052 l. 9 s. 4 d.

The amount stated on the back of that account to have been allowed as interest on depositors' balances during the year was also falsified, the real amount so allowed having been 1,844 l. 12 s. 4 d., and not 1,636 l. 12 s. 4 d. as therein stated; and it is thence evident that there was an actual loss on the proceedings of the bank during that year of 184 l. 16 s. 8 d., instead of an increase of the surplus of 23 l. 3 s. 4 d., as would appear from the statement itself.

Similar falsifications have been made in all the annual statements I have examined.

These balance sheets have been so skilfully arranged, agreeing with the monthly returns of cash received and paid which are required to be made to the National Debt Office, and disagreeing from the truth only in the classified statements of balances, and in the amounts of interest allowed to the depositors, which there are no means of checking at the National Debt Office, that it has been impossible that the frauds should have been discovered there.

Mr. Yelf's confession, and the cases which you have laid before the magistrates, show that during the last 15 years considerable sums have from time to time been abstracted from the funds of the institution. One mode of effecting this appears to have been the production by the secretary of fictitious documents, ments, purporting to be signed by depositors, giving notice of their intention to withdraw a part or the whole of their deposits; on the faith of which cheques have been signed by the attending director, without seeing the pass-book, and without ascertaining whether such sums were really standing in the ledger or not.

These cheques have been entrusted to the secretary for delivery to the depositors at any time they might call for them, instead of insisting on the personal attendance of the depositors to receive them during bank hours, in pursuance of one of the rules of the institution, which prohibits the receipt or payment of any deposits at any other time.

Some of the sums for which cheques were thus obtained were not standing at all in the bank books, or having formerly stood there had already been withdrawn; others were standing there, but no real notice of withdrawal had been given by the depositors, who never received the cheques so obtained.

These fraudulent withdrawals were entered among the cash payments of the day, but could not generally be posted in the ledger, because there were no accounts to post them to, or if there were, the posting would have made a disagreement with the pass-books.

In some cases, however, it appears that fictitious accounts have been raised in the ledgers and closed again immediately with fraudulent repayments, and in other cases in which the amounts had been previously withdrawn, the dates of the real withdrawals have been altered into those of the fraudulent ones.

Another mode of abstracting the bank funds has been, paying in to the treasurer a less sum than has been received on a bank day.

A director always attended on those days, and counted the money which was received by the secretary; but it was not the practice to keep a duplicate cash-book, and the casting of that kept by the secretary was generally entrusted to him. At the end of the day the cash was delivered to the secretary, to be taken to the treasurer, and he has (certainly in one instance, and probably in others) withheld a portion of it, making the total of his cash-book agree with the amount actually paid in.

If any other means of fraud were adopted, they have always been so contrived that the cash-book has agreed with the amounts paid to the treasurer, and the ledger accounts with the pass-books held by the depositors. The discrepancy has been between the cash-book and the ledgers, no comparison of which has ever been instituted.

Mr. Yelf has acknowledged that since the year 1838 he has appropriated 4,182 l. of the funds of the bank to his own purposes. I am of opinion that he has misapplied a much larger amount, for, although the deficiency thus created has necessarily increased year after year from the absence of the interest and compound interest which should have accrued on the misappropriated amount, this non-accumulation of interest cannot possibly have swelled the deficiency in 15 years from 4,182*l.* to 8,156*l.* 1*s.*

The cause of the deficiency, however, having been ascertained, it is scarcely necessary to enter into a laborious and expensive investigation for the purpose of tracing out every act of fraud which has been committed by Mr. Yelf, or by showing how much of the deficiency has really gone into his pocket, and how much has arisen from the non-accumulation of interest. These particulars, unimportant in themselves, might certainly be arrived at, but it could be only by a minute examination of every item received and paid during the last 15 years (or probably more), a task which would occupy several months.

The manner in which the increasing defalcation has been concealed from those who have examined and signed the annual accounts may be thus explained:

It has been the practice for many years for the trustees or directors to examine the annual balance-book (or list of balances due to depositors, prepared by the secretary at the end of each year) against the ledgers. This has generally been done with the assistance of the secretary himself, who held the ledgers and called over from them the amount of each balance he pretended to find there. But up to 1848 he had left out of the balance-book a sufficient number of balances to make up the amount of the general deficiency (which must have been very exactly ascertained); and in calling over the amounts from the ledgers he must have omitted to call the balances so left out, which he had no doubt previously marked for that purpose.

In

In 1849, however, a new state of things arose. Up to this time it had not been the practice to examine the pass-books as they came in with the ledgers or balance-books; but in 1849 (in consequence of various defalcations in other savings banks) the National Debt Office suggested to all such institutions that all their pass-books should be called in, and compared by the trustees and managers with the ledgers, and a similar course taken from time to time. The suggestion was adopted at this bank, and the practice established of having the balance-book always on the table when the bank was open, and of comparing with it every pass-book that was brought in, marking both pass-book and balance-book with the attending manager's initials. This made it necessary that the balance-book should contain all the open accounts, and Mr. Yelf could no longer leave out of it a portion of the balances equal to the general deficiency.

But a new mode of deception was adopted in the annual examination of the balance-book. Both ledger and balance-book were placed in the hands of trustees or directors, but when they had satisfied themselves that all the balances had been correctly transferred from one to the other, they shrank from the laborious task of adding together two or three thousand amounts, and invariably left that duty to the secretary; and the annual accounts have been signed trusting to the correctness of his addition, which was always found to coincide with the amount of the funds in hand.

In point of fact, the addition of each page of the balance-book was correct, but the total of each page was brought into a summary page at the end; and in doing so 1,000*l.* was dropped in one place, 1,000*l.* in another, in the capital column, and 20*l.* here and 30*l.* there in the interest column, with some odd money to make up the required difference, and thus the total amount was made to agree with the actual assets of the bank. In 1852 a still bolder step was taken. Instead of altering the sums brought forward in so many different places, only two sums were reduced by 1,000*l.* each, but 6,000*l.* was miscast in the addition of one of the columns of the summary sheet, and the total amount was thus kept down to the required sum.

From these practices it will be seen how imperfect a system has been pursued, and how little it was calculated to prevent or discover fraud. If the balances prior to 1849 had been checked by two directors instead of allowing the secretary to assist in auditing his own accounts; if his casting of the balance-book had been properly checked; or if, subsequently to 1849, the summaries had been compared with the pages from which the totals were brought forward, the whole defalcation must have been discovered.

Had the ledgers been referred to, or the pass-books produced with the notices of withdrawal before cheques were signed for them; had the cheques not called for been cancelled, or kept for delivery within bank hours according to the rule; had a duplicate cash-book been kept as a check on that of the secretary, and had the postings in the ledger been checked with the cash-book, the fraudulent payments must have been detected, or would never have been attempted.

The unbounded confidence which the trustees and directors seem to have reposed in the honesty of a single individual, and the consequent want of a sufficient check on his accounts, have led to this lamentable result.

I am quite aware how difficult it is to induce gentlemen to take an active part in the duties of these institutions, and how small a number of those who lend their names to them will give their personal attendance and supervision. The few who do so are, I believe, actuated by the kindest motives towards their poorer neighbours, and as the law prohibits them from receiving any remuneration for their services, I am not surprised that men who have business of their own to attend to, or who are not men of business habits, should shrink from the task of adding up 60 or 70 pages of balances, each containing 30 or 40 amounts, or even of checking off each week's proceedings, consisting generally of from 60 to 100 entries; but I would venture to suggest, should the bank survive the shock it has received, and be continued or re-established, that if trustees and directors are not prepared to undertake so laborious a duty themselves, it should not be left to the only person who has it in his power to deceive them, but that a paid auditor should be provided to examine the accounts, who should be wholly independent of the assistance of the secretary, and should have nothing whatever to do with the funds of the institution.

The system that has been pursued has practically left the whole control of the receipt and payment of about 30,000 l. a year to one individual, a temptation which the experience of this and other savings banks has shown to be far too great to be placed in any man's power, however high a character he may appear to maintain.

I hope, gentlemen, you will not think that I go beyond my office in making these remarks. I feel it necessary to do so on behalf of the depositors, whose interests seem to me to be those most deeply concerned in the result of my labours.

In pointing out so minutely to you, and through you to them, how this loss has arisen, and how it might have been avoided, I conceive that I am taking the best and surest means of re-inspiring confidence amongst the depositors in the future management of the bank, as they will naturally feel assured that the defects which have been exposed will be amended, and that a greater degree of caution will henceforward be exercised against any others that may arise.

I beg to enclose a short statement of the present position of the bank, and a list of the balances now due to depositors.

There is a small sum due for firing at Ryde, and a carpenter's bill of a few shillings.

There may be a bill for printing, &c. due to Mr. Yelf, besides his allowance as secretary from November last. But he owes something for the rent of the house he lived in, which belonged to the bank.

It remains to be decided how these latter points are to be settled.

* Half a year's interest will become due at the National Debt Office on the 20th May next, amounting to about 940 l. But the interest which has become due to depositors since the 20th November last (if calculated at the rate hitherto given) will amount to about 990 l.

Sir,

As the trustees have made arrangements by public announcements to pay to the depositors in the above savings bank a dividend of 17 s. 6 d. in the pound on the amounts standing in their several names on the 20th instant, and as such dividend will commence on Monday the 6th June, I am desired to apply for some forms for drafts, which you will please to forward to me by return of post.

The directors will require the sum of 10,000 l. here on Saturday the 4th June, and probably from 10,000 l. to 20,000 l. additional in the course of the week following.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 23 May 1853.

I HAVE had the honour to receive Mr. Young's letter, dated 21st instant, in which he states that as you have made arrangements by public announcement to pay to the depositors in your savings bank a dividend of 17 s. 6 d. in the pound on the amounts standing in their several names on the 20th instant, he was desired to apply for some forms of drafts to be forwarded to him by return of post.

The regulations of this office prescribe, as you are aware, that no such drafts can be delivered, except upon a requisition signed by two of the trustees of a savings bank, authorised to make application for such drafts. The moment such a requisition is received the drafts shall be forwarded; and I have already furnished the proper form of application to your agent to be transmitted to you by the post of this day.

You have not made known to this department the principle upon which you propose to make payment of a dividend of 17 s. 6 d. only in each pound actually due to a depositor. The Commissioners find, however, in Mr. Grey's report, that the sum due to your depositors is 66,778 l. 12 s. 10 d., and that the money then at your disposal in this office, and in the hands of the treasurer, was 58,622 l. 11 s. 10 d., to which must be added the interest on your investments, due 20th May, viz., 935 l., the amount of which several sums, viz., 59,557 l. 11 s. 10 d., would enable you to pay more than the dividend named by you.

It is their duty besides to point out to you that the building in which the business of the bank has been carried on is the property of the now existing depositors, and that no payment made to them, short of 20 s. in the pound, can relieve you from the responsibility of making such building available as an asset towards the liquidation of their claims in full.

I have, &c.

The Trustees, Savings Bank, (signed) A. Y. Spearman.
Newport, Isle of Wight.

Sir, Newport, Isle of Wight, 24 May 1853.

I AM favoured with your letter of yesterday, and beg to state in reply that I have forwarded to Mr. Hudson (our agent) by this post the necessary requisition from our trustees for the blank drafts.

The directors instruct me to inform you, that with reference to the dividend of 17 s. 6 d. proposed to be paid to the depositors at the present time, they give them the dividend on the amount of their deposits, with interest to the 20th instant, which dividend will absorb nearly the whole of the assets in the hands of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt (including the half-year's interest of 935 l. from the Commissioners) and the balance in the hands of the treasurer.

You will observe by the enclosed form of receipt, proposed to be taken from the depositors on payment of the dividend, that the right is reserved to them of any further dividends which the assets of the bank may enable the directors to make.

The bank house, of course, forms part of the assets, and when disposed of, another dividend will be declared.

The amounts mentioned in your letter are correct; but as the dividend includes interest to depositors up to 20th instant, which interest is more than the 935 l. received from the National Debt Office, a very small sum will remain in the treasurer's hands after the payment of the dividend of 17 s. 6 d. in the pound.

We have not quite completed our calculations for the dividend; when that is done we will transmit a full statement of the liabilities and assets.

I have, &c.

THE Savings Bank Bill before the House of Commons in the Session of 1853 being then under consideration of the House, the trustees and managers of the Newport, Isle of Wight, Savings Bank applied to be informed in what manner that bank would be considered under the proposed clause for giving the Government security to the depositors. The following reply was made to that application:—

Sir, National Debt Office, 25 June 1853.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date. It would be difficult, indeed impossible for me to say positively at present what way the Newport Savings Bank would fall to be considered under the Bill now before the House of Commons, should it, so far as relates to the 82d section, become law.

I should, however, be inclined to think that wherever you can show the direct acceptance by a depositor of 17 s. 6 d. per pound sterling, the Commissioners would be satisfied that that is the sum for which the bank is responsible in respect of such depositor; but when no such consent is given, the mere resolution of the trustees and managers to pay only at that rate would not justify this department department in considering the assets sufficient to warrant the appointment of a receiver, unless the total amount of the deposit accounts due to non-assenting parties, added to the reduced amounts due to assenting parties, should prove to be, when so added together, less than the amount of the assets of the bank.

I do not think the Commissioners could appoint a receiver until satisfied, in such a case as this, where there is an admitted defalcation, that every party is content, and shows by his own act that he is content, to accept the smaller sum as a liquidation of the larger; and I do not, in fact, think the Commissioners could take the responsibility of appointing a receiver for a part of the depositors with a portion of the fund, regardless of the situation in which they might themselves thereby be placed with respect to the remainder of the depositors.

If I am right in this, no receiver can be appointed until the bank has arranged with the whole of its depositors, but the matter is too important for me to speak authoritatively upon it in this off-hand manner; I will, however, if that be desired, take a legal opinion upon it, if the trustees will furnish me, under their hands, with a statement of facts for the purpose.

The trustees are desirous of having the bond and policy of the Guarantee Association deposited by Mr. Robert Fox, the late actuary of this savings bank, in the National Debt Office, because at the time of his resignation he was owing to the trustees a few pounds, and they wish to apply to the Guarantee Association for the money. Will you therefore please to send me the form required to obtain them. The postmaster in this town informs me it is not necessary to pay the postage of letters, &c. addressed to the National Debt Office. Will you oblige me by informing me whether I must continue to do so or not. Your attention will oblige,

Sir, Savings Bank, Runcorn, 15 June 1855.

In accordance with your favour, dated the 24th March, the trustees of this bank have made out a statement of the money owing by the late actuary, Mr. Robert Fox, to them, and are desirous of submitting it to you in the first instance before forwarding a copy of it to J. Tidd Pratt, esq. They have particularized the first half year and the subsequent year; but as all which follows is so similar (cheques received and payments made), they do not wish to trouble you with every item in detail, and have compressed them into totals. Permit me to remind you that Mr. Fox was guaranteed to you and the trustees of this bank by the British Guarantee Association, London, commencing on the 6th June 1849 and ending on the 6th June 1854, and that the sum guaranteed was 200*l.* It might appear at first sight that sufficient watchfulness and care had not been bestowed by the auditors and trustees, so as to have prevented the actuary being so much in debt, and perhaps this in some measure may have been the case; but it is much extenuated when I state that the most active and vigilant auditor, Denis Brundrit, esq., began to decline in health about the beginning of 1851, and died the same year. One of the other auditors, Mr. Richard Jones, changed his residence from this town, and of course in a great measure the bank lost his services. Mr. Fox took advantage of these circumstances to draw cheques, signed by different and numerous managers, unacquainted (in many instances) with the finances of the bank and his accounts. He therefore overdrew for expenses; and as soon as it was known to the auditors, they took measures to stop his salary, in part payment, as in the years ending November 1852 and 1853; but his necessitous wants were so numerous, that 13*l.* 15*s.* 3½*d.* was all that they could retain. In the following year the practice continued, and they determined upon his dismissal. He has never assisted in making out an enumeration of his liabilities, though repeatedly asked to do so; but you will perceive, on reference to the annual statement made on the 20th November 1854, that he represents the sum of 66*l.* 5*s.* 11½*d.* to be in his hands, and 198*l.* 5*s.* 9½*d.* in the hands of the treasurer. At your first convenience, will you please to favour the trustees with your sentiments and wishes upon this subject.

I have, &c.

To Sir A. Y. Spearman, Bart. (signed) W. F. Salkeld, Actuary.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 16 June 1855.

I have received your letter of 15th June, enclosing a statement of the pecuniary transactions of your late actuary with the authorities managing and superintending the transaction of the business, from which it appears that under the system acted upon in your savings bank he has been able to abstract and defraud the establishment of the sum of 65*l.* 14*s.* 5*d.*

The explanation afforded as to the mode in which he was enabled to do so is certainly by no means satisfactory to this department. It shows that the managers of the savings bank have placed the money of the depositors at his disposal without taking the precaution of ascertaining, first, that such issue of money was proper, and next, of making sure, without delay, that he had properly applied it.

How far they may by such proceeding have made themselves personally liable will be seen when the matter is brought judicially under the review of the barrister-at-law.

It also appears that he has been continued in office for some years after knowledge was obtained of the fraudulent practices having commenced, a proceeding which was to the last degree objectionable, and for which those who concurred in it are highly reprehensible. There can be no safety when a fraud once discovered is, in a certain sense, connived at, in such cases affecting, as it does, the property of the depositors, themselves almost necessarily ignorant of the matter.

I shall be glad to know what arrangements you propose for the future. One, really necessary, appears to be, that the actuary should be prohibited, on pain of immediate dismissal, from holding the money of the depositors. Whatever is done in that respect could be more properly done by a manager or trustee.

The Trustees of the Savings Bank, Runcorn.

Sir, Savings Bank, Runcorn, 25 June 1855.

THE trustees have received your letter of the 16th instant, and I am requested by them to say that the present actuary does not hold money in his possession, which we hope and believe will be a sufficient guarantee against the recurrence of the irregularities which have crept into the bank; but we are sorry to say that there is another demand come upon the trustees, which was not anticipated, viz., 46 l. 12 s. 4 d. by the treasurer for bank commission, as expenses for remitting the money and receiving from London when required, from the year 1842 to November 1854. The treasurer has certified the annual returns for so much money being in his hands; and for the year ending November 1854, he has stated, as you will perceive on reference to that return, that he had then 198 l. 5 s. 9 ½ d., and the actuary 66 l. 5 s. 11 ½ d.

On his resignation, and the appointment of the present treasurer, he was called upon to pay over the said sum of 198 l. 5 s. 9 ½ d., but he deducted for bank commission 46 l. 12 s. 4 d., as before stated, and only gave Mr. Simpson (the present treasurer) the balance.

The late actuary, Mr. Fox, in his expenses accounts, has charged the sum of 32 l. 0 s. 10 ½ d. as bank commission; and the difference between that sum and the 46 l. 12 s. 4 d. will have arisen, we presume, to the end of 1854. So that the defalcation of Mr. Fox will be increased by this sum, although not more than 2 l. 10 s. will come within the time that he was guaranteed by the British Association.

What we wish to know is, and we shall be glad if you will inform the trustees, whether the late treasurer is justified in now deducting this sum of 46 l. 12 s. 4 d., after having neglected to do so, as it has arisen, for so many years, and when by his signature to the annual returns, it would appear to have been paid. Your answer would much oblige the trustees.

I have, &c.

Sir A. Y. Spearman, Bart.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 26 June 1855.

I TAKE leave to refer you to the 6th section of the Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, of which I enclose a copy.

If the treasurer shall have deducted the sum of 46 l. 12 s. 4 d., or any part of it, as a charge for his own profit, then I think the charge is illegal, and cannot be supported by him, without entering into the question of time; but upon that point also I am clearly of opinion that he should have made no demand now for anything anterior to the last year up to 20th November 1854, when, by his own signature, he admitted that he held the balance as the assets of the bank. The whole matter is altogether irregular, for he had no right, nor has any treasurer a right, to make any payment, except upon the authority of the trustees and managers, which you do not appear to have given.

If subsequently to 20th November 1854 he has incurred actual expenses, then he is entitled to make a charge for such expenses.

These are my opinions as to the proper rights of a treasurer; but I do not, of course, give it as a legal opinion: I should, however, be sorry to find that treasurers of savings banks took a different view of the matter.

If the treasurer does not pay over what is legally due, the proper remedy would be by action on his bond; but legal advice should be had recourse to before such a step is taken.

With respect to the actuary, I have only to say, that it is impossible for me to understand upon what ground any such charge can have been made by an actuary. I regret to perceive in these additional facts additional proof how extremely deficient the management of the bank has hitherto been in one of its most important particulars,—incessant, anxious, and watchful supervision over everything relating to receipt, expenditure, and accountability.

I have, &c.

In relation to the foregoing, with reference to the remuneration to the treasurer, I have also to refer you to the first rule of your bank on that subject.

The Trustees of the Savings Bank,
Runcorn.

COPY of the Sixth Section of Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, referred to in the aforegoing Letter.

AND be it further enacted, that no such institution as aforesaid shall have the benefit of this Act, unless it shall be expressly provided by the rules and regulations for the management thereof that no person or persons being treasurer, trustee, or manager of such institution, or having any control in the management thereof, shall derive any benefit from any deposit made in such institution, save only and except such salaries and allowances, or other necessary expenses, as shall, according to such rules and regulations, be provided for the charges of managing such institution, and for remuneration to officers employed in the management thereof, exclusive of the treasurer or treasurers, trustee or trustees, manager or managers, or other person having direction in the management of such institution, who shall not, directly or indirectly, have any salary, allowance, profit, or benefit whatsoever therefrom, beyond their actual expenses or the purposes of such institution.

Sir, Savings Bank, Runcorn, 10 July 1855.

FROM the tenour of your favour received by the trustees of this bank on the 29th of June, they fear that you have misunderstood their letter to you, dated the 25th of that month.

They do not for one moment mean to say that the late treasurer has charged any portion of the 46*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* upon any other grounds than to reimburse himself for actual expenses charged against him by his bankers for transmission of money to and from London between the years 1842 and November 1854. The late actuary charged in his accounts for these expenses the sums as stated in the enclosed account*, and exactly in the same order; and as the late treasurer annually affixed his name to the form showing the balance he had in his hands, the trustees could not otherwise think than that he had received the above amount.

* At end

The balance of 14*l.* 11*s.* 5½*d.* (which with the sum of 32*l.* 0*s.* 10½*d.* charged as herein stated, will make up the 46*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.*) has not been charged at any time by the late actuary to the debit of the bank, and therefore may equitably, though perhaps not legally, be said now to be due to the late treasurer, who ought not to have allowed it to stand over unclaimed until he had given up his treasurership, and another person appointed in his stead.

The trustees and managers have, however, endeavoured to effect an arrangement of this matter with the late treasurer, but without success; and he still retains the gross sum of 46*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.*

If, therefore, the Commissioners, after giving the matter their fullest consideration, deration, consider this sum to be the property of the bank, it remains for them to take such steps as they may deem proper to recover it. Runcorn.

The trustees will be glad to hear from the Commissioners for their government.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 11 July 1855.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday, further relating to the charge made by the late treasurer for commission on his transactions with the bank. The explanation you now give certainly does not make the matter better, because it appears that the trustees and managers have, from and including the year 1842 up to 1850, actually allowed in the late actuary's accounts sums, amounting to 32 l. 0 s. 10½ d., charged by him as banking commission, without requiring, apparently, the slightest proof that any such payments were ever made.

It would, therefore, now seem, first, that the actuary has been permitted to defraud the bank of 32 l. 0 s. 10½ d., under the pretence that he had paid it as bank commission; and second, that that very amount, as part of the larger sum of 46 l. 12 s. 4 d., has been retained by the late treasurer out of the monies in his hands, as due to him, whereby the depositors, owing to the want of care and proper superintendence on the part of those in whom they have placed confidence as trustees and managers, will have had the amount withdrawn from their funds twice over.

But whatever may be the opinion of this department upon the subject, or as to the right of the treasurer, or the conduct of the various parties throughout these transactions, the Commissioners have no legal authority to interfere between the late treasurer and the trustees; the trustees must exercise their own judgment, and act thereupon on their own responsibility.

Sir, Savings Bank, Runcorn, 11 July 1855.

I AM requested by the trustees of this bank to lay before you the enclosed account of the defalcations of the late actuary, Robert Fox, and to say that it is in accordance with instructions received by them from Sir A. Y. Spearman, bart., the Comptroller-general at the National Debt Office, London, from whom the trustees have been honoured by several recent communications upon this subject.

Robert Fox was guaranteed by the British Association, London, to the Comptroller-general from the 6th June 1849 to the 6th of June 1854 (by bond in the usual form), when the guarantee expired, by reason of the non-payment of the premium, after that day. The amount guaranteed was 200 l.

Robert Fox was enabled to defraud the bank by means of obtaining the signatures to cheques on the treasurer of young and inexperienced managers whom he called to the bank to act for the day, although there was the most strict orders given by the auditors that no cheque should be given for expenses except by themselves. But owing to the serious illness, and in the same year the death of the most active auditor, Denis Brundrit, esq., J. P., and the change of residence of the other auditor, Mr. Richard Jones, Fox was enabled, by showing the most anxious and urgent necessity for the bank's welfare (apparently), to induce the managers to sign, as before stated.

Again, he has charged 32 l. 0 s. 10 ½ d. for bank commission, from 1842 to November 1850, and not paid it to the treasurer, which the trustees could only know when the late treasurer resigned office at the commencement of the present year. Only about 2 l. 10 s. would be charged during the period he was guaranteed by the association. Robert Fox was dismissed from the bank early in the present year, and the writer was appointed to succeed him on the 20th January last.

The trustees in very respectfully laying these particulars before you, would be sorry to trouble you with a great many figures, and have therefore condensed them after the first year and half of the account.

They also would feel much obliged if you will inform them what course they are to pursue in reference to Robert Fox's defalcations.

I have, &c.

J. Tidd Pratt, Esq. (signed) W. F. Salkeld, Actuary.

In reply to the above letter, Mr. Pratt directed the trustees to make their claim on the British Guarantee Association.

Sir, Savings Bank, Runcorn, 5 August 1855.

AT a meeting of the trustees and managers of this bank, convened for the purpose of considering Mr. Robert Fox's defalcation and other matters, I was instructed to send to you a copy of a letter (enclosed) which has been received from the British Guarantee Association, 9, Waterloo-place, London, wherein you will see that the directors of that association refuse to pay the claim made upon them for Mr. Robert Fox's defalcation, amounting to 68 l. 4 s. 5 d.

The trustees and managers consider that they have no alternative but to refer the matter to you for judgment, and any papers, documents, or evidence which you may require from them, that they possess, will be promptly sent as soon as your wishes are made known to them.

Permit me to remind you that Mr. Robert Fox was the actuary of this bank from its commencement in 1842 to the beginning of January in the present year, and at first his sureties were private individuals; but from the 6th of June 1849 to the 6th of June 1854 he was guaranteed (per bond to the Comptroller-general) by the British Guarantee Association. During this period, owing to the illness and death of two of the most active auditors, Denis Brundrit, esq., and Mr. Edward Atherton Lingard, and likewise to the change of residence of the other, Mr. Richard Jones, out of this town, he artfully so arranged the books and accounts, and practised on the inexperience of their successors in the office of auditors, and upon a fresh lot of managers, that the defalcations, though suspected, were not ascertained till the beginning of this year, when he was requested to account for them, and failing to do so, he resigned, and the writer of this was appointed his successor on the 20th of January last.

On the 27th of December 1854 the Guarantee Association wrote to the trustees that the policy of Mr. Robert Fox had expired, by reason of the non-payment of the premium. On the 23d January 1855 a letter was written to the association by one of the trustees, James Cairley, esq., stating, amongst other things, "that we have just ascertained the deficiency on his part to be about 70 l. The precise amount cannot be stated for a few days."

A committee of five trustees and managers was then formed to investigate the books and accounts, and the sum of 65 l. 14 s. 5 d. they reported to a subsequent meeting to be the sum they had found him to be deficient during the period he was guaranteed by the British Association; and on the 20th February last a formal demand was made by me for this money from them; at the same time a statement of the claim was given.

The sum of 2 l. 10 s. for bank commission, charged and not paid to the treasurer, has also been discovered since then, making the total sum which we have demanded from the Guarantee Association 68 l. 4 s. 5 d.

A statement of the particulars has also been sent to Sir A. Y. Spearman, bart.

The trustees therefore leave the matter in your hands, and, when convenient, they hope to be favoured with a communication from you.

I have, &c.

John Tidd Pratt, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, London.

Sir, Savings Bank, Runcorn, 8 September 1855.

I AM directed by the trustees and managers to forward you a copy of a letter received from the secretary of the British Guarantee Association, from which you will perceive that the directors offer to pay half of our alleged claim.

The trustees are averse to come to any conclusion in the matter without your sanction, as the whole circumstances have been submitted to your consideration; at the same time, they are willing to accept the offer of the Guarantee Association, if you recommend them to do so.

Permit me also to remind you that the offer of the directors, dated the 1st instant, is limited to 14 days; an early answer therefore will oblige.

Gentlemen, Savings Bank, Runcorn, 10 November 1855.

I BEG to inform you that the claims against the Guarantee Society arising from Mr. Robert Fox's defalcations have been settled in the following manner:

The claim the trustees made was for the deficiency which has appeared on the face of the returns weekly, 61 l. 5 s. 11 ½ d.

The society have paid, and the trustees are willing to accept, 50 l. in full of all demands; consequently, the difference of 11 l. 5 s. 11 ½ d. is charged to the bank as expenses.

I am desired to inform you of this arrangement, and

SAVINGS BANKS, BRADFORD, WILTS.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 24 April 1855. Bradford, Wilts.

THE actuary of our savings bank, Mr. Joseph Gordon Jones, having unhappily proved a defaulter in the accounts to a considerable amount, we have been obliged at once to call for his resignation. We are anxious to ascertain what steps ought to be taken by the trustees of the savings bank for the recovery of the money of the depositors.

I have, therefore, as one of the trustees, and at the request of many of the managers, to ask for your advice. It is conceived by some, that as the actuary is, or will be made a bankrupt (unless some previous arrangement be made with his creditors), the trustees have a primary charge on his estate for the whole of the money due to the savings bank. In the view of others, we ought at once to apply to the bondsmen for payment.

The bond given when Mr. J. G. Jones was appointed actuary is, I apprehend, in your hands. If you could favour me with a copy of it, or at least with the names of the bondsmen, I should be very much obliged.

I am, &c.

BY 3 Will. 4, c. 14, s. 28, the trustees have a prior claim in case of a bankruptcy in respect of any monies belonging to the savings bank in the possession of the bankrupt, by virtue of his office or employment, but the trustees should in the first case sue the surety upon the bond, though, if the actuary is made a bankrupt, notice of the claim should be given to the assignees.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 26 April 1855.

At a meeting of our savings bank, held this day, it was resolved to seek the assistance of some accountant well accustomed to the savings bank system, &c., who might thoroughly investigate our accounts.

It was suggested that probably there might be attached to your office some one or more gentlemen upon whom such duties might occasionally devolve. We believe that in other cases of defalcations of actuaries you have sent down an authorised inspector from your office.

I was requested to ask whether such an officer could be sent to us; and if so, whether we should, either from the funds of the savings bank, or from the private resources of the managers, have to pay all the expenses incurred. Our savings bank profits, from which all expenses and stipends are paid, amount to but little more than 20*l.* per annum, and therefore we are naturally anxious to know what, in the event of such an official investigation, the expenses would be, and how they are to be met.

Sir, National Debt Office, 27 April 1855.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday.

There can be no doubt that the resolution of the trustees and managers, which you communicate to me, is extremely proper, because it is not only desirable but necessary, that, under the circumstances of the case, a thorough and searching examination should be made into the accounts, and books and transactions of the savings bank, no less for the security of the depositors than for that of the trustees and managers; and by a person versed in such matters, and entirely unconnected with the bank.

But there is no person upon this establishment who could be deputed to proceed to Bradford for such a purpose. In one or two other cases, I have, when applied to by trustees and managers, suggested to them that they might satisfactorily engage the services of Mr. Grey, who is thoroughly conversant with savings bank management and accounts, and has been very much engaged in such inquiries; but I have always been obliged to add, that this office could not undertake to defray the expenses of such an examination, which must fall on the funds of the savings bank, or upon the trustees and managers personally.

I will readily, if it be desired, communicate with Mr. Grey, or if you prefer to address yourselves directly to him, a letter will find him if it be addressed W. H. Grey, esq., 48, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields.

It is needless for me to add, that I will gladly give every assistance which it may be in my power to afford.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 10 May 1855.

We have this day elected an actuary to our savings bank in the place of Mr. J. G. Jones, resigned. Will you oblige me by informing me of the amount of security required, and by furnishing me, if you have such a thing, with the Form of Bond that you consider necessary in his case.

I am, &c.
(signed) W. H. Jones,
The Secretary, National Debt Office. Trustee of the Savings Bank.

Sir, National Debt Office, 11 May 1855.

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, and to state in reply to your question as to the amount of security to be required from the actuary of the Bradford Savings Bank, that it is a matter for the trustees and managers alone to determine, and rests entirely on their responsibility.

The Form of Bond I enclose.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 11 May 1855.

I should be obliged if you could allow us to see the papers of the weekly balances sent up to your office by our late actuary. We wish them for the purpose of an investigation which is now being made into the accounts. We shall like to have them, if you have no objection, from November 20, 1854.

I am, &c.

National Debt Office.

Sir, National Debt Office, 12 May 1855.

I have to state, in reply to your letter of yesterday's date, that it is not the practice of this office to part with original papers; I therefore enclose copies of the weekly returns received from the Bradford Savings Bank from the 20th November 1854, which I hope will serve the purpose for which the information is required.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 16 May 1855.

Referring to the several communications which have already taken place between you and this department on the subject of the defalcation of Mr. Jones, your late actuary, I am now to request that you will inform me whether the investigation which you have been carrying on into the accounts of the savings bank has been brought to a conclusion, and what is the result. If that inquiry shall still be going on, I request that you will communicate to me the result when it shall be terminated.

I shall be glad to learn, at the same time, what steps you have taken or propose to take for securing the payment of the whole sum in respect of which Mr. Jones shall have made default.

You are, of course, aware that there is deposited in this office a bond approved by two trustees and three managers, given by Mr. Jones and by Mr. James Payne Budgett, for 1,000 l., upon which proceedings can be taken in respect to both of them.

The Commissioners further desire to be informed of the arrangements you propose to make for the future. Upon this point I cannot do better than transmit to you extract of a letter addressed to the trustees of the savings bank at Yoxall, where a defalcation has also taken place by the misconduct of the late actuary.

EXTRACT above referred to.

What steps the trustees and managers propose to take to prevent the possibility of such frauds hereafter?—One step which the Commissioners consider to be of great importance is this, that the officers of the bank should be prohibited, on pain of instant dismissal, from receiving or having in custody any money, at any time, on account of the depositors.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 16 May 1855.

IN reply to your letter I have to state that an investigation is now being made into the accounts of our savings bank. We felt that the expense of an accountant from town would probably be greater than we could very well meet, and so have requested that gentlemen well versed in accounts do make at least a preliminary examination. It will be some time before all the pass-books can be got in, in order to their being compared with the ledger. A formal demand has not yet been made on Mr. J. G. Jones's surety for the deficiency in his accounts, because we are anxious to ascertain, first of all, precisely what that deficiency is.

A new actuary has been appointed, and the bond for 1,000 l., which we have required from him, is being prepared by our solicitors. By a plan we have now adopted it will be impossible for him to retain any money in his hands. He is required, on pain of dismissal, to bring a certificate of the balance in hand, after the closing of the savings bank on each Saturday evening, having been paid into the treasurer's hands on the following Monday morning, to one of the trustees in the course of that day. As the new actuary is the clerk of the North Wilts Banking Company in this town, we have every means of ascertaining at once the fact of the money having been paid.

I will communicate to you the result of the investigation as soon as possible.

I am, &c.
(signed) W. H. Jones.

P. S.—I must trouble you for copies of the weekly returns from 20 November 1853 to 20 November 1854, for the purpose of testing the accounts.

Sir, National Debt Office, 21 May 1855.

I DESPATCHED to you, a day or two ago, the copies of the weekly returns from the Bradford Savings Bank.

I now enclose the Form of Bond required from the officers of savings banks: you will see that it can be prepared without difficulty and without expense.

No stamp duty attaches on these bonds.

Bradford, Wilts.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 21 May 1855.

I HAVE to thank you for copies of the weekly returns furnished to the National Debt Office by our late actuary, for the year ending 20 November 1854.

I am sorry to inform you that our investigation proves that he has long been in the habit of keeping considerable sums of money in his hands, and falsifying the weekly returns. I send you an analysis of the accounts from last November till 24 March. By comparing them with the returns in your office, you will see that the deception practised has been systematic. We have determined to proceed with the scrutiny for at least six years back; for this purpose I must again ask for the weekly returns between 20 November 1848 till 20 November 1853. Perhaps much trouble might be saved if you would allow one of the clerks in your office to fill in the blank forms which I venture to send. Of course the return of the balance in treasurer's hands is correct, as it is furnished at the bank, and therefore it is not necessary for us to ask you for this item in the account. One remark, however, I would make, viz., that the bank return was invariably "nil," when there was no cash in hand, even though the account might be considerably overdrawn: this would of course prevent you having any check on the accounts.

On two points I am anxious to have your opinion:—

1. It has been suggested that we must make a formal demand on Mr. J. G. Jones's surety for a definite sum, and then give him a complete discharge. In common with many, I feel that though we may fully believe that we have arrived at the exact deficiency, yet that, as we find it impossible to get in all the depositors' pass-books, many of them having changed their residences, we must hold the surety responsible for any future deficiency that we may possibly find; in fact, we ought, it appears to us, to give him credit for the sum demanded, when paid, but still hold him responsible for any future deficiency, if such be ascertained. The bond, however, is made to the Comptroller-general of the National Debt Office, and therefore we await your directions.

2. For some years Mr. J. G. Jones has had sums of money in his hands belonging to the savings bank; we have lost the interest on them: have we any claim on the surety for the interest lost? If so, on what principle is the sum on which it is payable to be reckoned? Of course, in the event of our having such a claim, the Statute of Limitation defines the time to which it will extend.

I have, &c.
(signed) W. H. Jones,
Trustee of Savings Bank.

The Comptroller-General,
National Debt Office.

Sir, National Debt Office, 23 May 1855.

THE forms drawn out by you have been correctly filled in from the returns transmitted from the Bradford Savings Bank from 27 November 1848 to 19 November 1853, and I now return them.

I shall be glad to learn the result of your examination of these papers.

If the trustees should give Mr. Jones and his surety a complete discharge without first making themselves sure that the whole sum due will be covered by the whole sum repaid, they will, I think, make themselves directly and personally responsible for any amount which may thereafter appear due from him, and which might have been recovered on his bond, had they not given him a complete discharge.

The trustees should take no step for discharging him, except upon full communication with this office.

I have, &c.

Bradford, Wilts.

Sir, National Debt Office, 2 June 1855.

It is with very sincere regret that I have compared the actual transactions of the Bradford Savings Bank, as shown in the detailed statement you transmitted to me, with the account of receipts from and payments to depositors, and of balances in the hands of the treasurer and of the actuary, as certified in the weekly statements from the savings bank rendered to this department from 20 November 1854, guaranteed as to their correctness by the signatures of the actuary, manager, and treasurer.

Assuming, as I do, of course, that the returns sent up by you after examination exhibit the actual facts, what justification should I have if I did not call attention, in the very strongest terms, to the entire worthlessness of the returns sent up weekly, accompanied by all the forms and all the signatures which were to guarantee to this department that the facts therein set forth were true; and what can be said of a system under which such returns can be so authenticated? I do not understand how any manager could be found to authenticate the correctness of an account until he had discharged his duty by ascertaining that it was so; and I am sure that, if loss is sustained by such neglect or misplaced confidence (which ought not to be placed anywhere when a specific duty is imposed), those covering such fraud as must have been practised will have incurred a very serious responsibility to the depositors.

I shall be anxious to receive further information when the examination is carried further back, and I trust that such arrangements will now be made as will ensure for the future, that duty, voluntarily undertaken, is really performed, and the depositors really protected.

Rev. W. H. Jones, Bradford, Wilts.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 4 June 1855.

I must fully admit the justice of the remarks in your last communication.

It has been usually considered that the trustees are not the proper parties to attend for the purpose of receiving and paying out money to depositors. The rules of the bank expressly state that the managers shall perform this duty. Two of the trustees have every year fully examined the accounts. Last year Mr. Bush and myself were the auditors. Of course the weekly papers are never seen by the trustees. We found the totals correct of what was placed before us. Without calling in all the pass-books, of course we could not detect what I have found out recently, that a sum of 100 l. received last year was not carried into account at all up to 20 November 1854.

At the last monthly meeting of trustees and managers, the services of five of the last-named class were volunteered and accepted, for the purpose of auditing the accounts of the bank. They have found (what the auditors found last November) that the entries in the day book and ledger correspond, and that the totals of both coincide up to 24 March, when the last actuary retired.

I thought it my duty, on the part of the trustees, to investigate most fully the accounts of the last six years. The results I have the honour to forward to you. They will speak for themselves, and tell a sad tale of duplicity. I find that up to November 1840 the actuary had no money at all in his hands. I suspect that about July 1841 he began to retain balances from time to time. If you should think it advisable to pursue the investigation further back than I have done, I will willingly undertake it, with the assistance of our new actuary. I make this offer with the view of saving expense, of which some of the managers are afraid, and because I feel that the trustees at least are in an independent position, the rules expressly stating it to be the duty of the managers to conduct the business of the institution.

In this case I will ask you to fill up the accompanying papers with the weekly returns made by our late actuary.

I have kept no copy of the "analyses of accounts." As we shall have a meeting on Monday next, I should be obliged if you could let me have it again by that time. I will then, if you wish it, return the document to your office. Bradford, Wilts.

I HAVE given directions that the forms sent up by you shall be filled in from the books of this office, and when completed, no delay shall take place in returning them to you.

It certainly appears to me that the very fullest investigation should take place, because until the most entire examination has been made it will be quite impossible for you to know to what extent the fraud has been carried.

My own opinion I acknowledge to be, that it would be far better, even now, to place the whole of the investigation in the hands of some experienced accountant, quite independent of trustees, managers, and depositors, accustomed to such transactions, and capable, therefore, of rapidly bringing the investigation to a close. There is this, among other reasons in favour of this course, that such a person would be a perfectly independent witness in any proceedings you may have to take upon the late actuary's bond. I cannot imagine the expense would be great; but I should think any reasonable sum well spent for such an object.

I shall not, I hope, be understood as in the slightest degree undervaluing the steps which you are now taking in the matter, but on the grounds I have stated I have always thought that it is better to employ a professional savings bank accountant.

Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 5 June 1855.

I OMITTED to state yesterday the steps we have thought it right to adopt for guarding for the future against any fraud on the part of our new actuary.

I have prepared a form, a copy of which I enclose, which he is required to fill up and get properly signed immediately after each evening's business at the savings bank. On the Monday, or as soon in the week as possible, the actuary is to submit the document, together with a proof that the balance, if any, is paid into the hands of the treasurer, to one of the trustees. Moreover, cheques on the treasurer are to be signed for the future by a trustee, and countersigned by the actuary. The actuary is forbidden to have any money in his hands on pain of instant dismissal.

I should be glad to have your opinion as to whether the trustees would be justified in giving Mr. J. G. Jones's surety a discharge on his paying 170*l.* 16*s.*, the sum which appears to be still due from the late actuary. The whole sum for which, at the time of his failure in business, he was a defaulter, was nearly 400*l.*, as you will see in the returns, 200*l.* having been paid by members of his family between 10th March and 24th March. I feel persuaded that the sum named, viz., 170*l.* 16*s.* (which coincides with his own acknowledged deficiency), is the correct balance now outstanding. Of course we have lost the interest on the sums in his hands from time to time.

I have, &c.

The Comptroller-General. (signed) W. H. Jones.

P. S.—I will ask you to be so good as to send us some more blank forms for weekly returns.

Sir, National Debt Office, 8 June 1855.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter of 5th June.

There is this defect in the form which you sent me; the actuary is required to submit to a trustee his own certificate that he has paid the sum stated thereon to the North Wilts Banking Company, and that certificate is apparently to be accepted as proof that such payment has been actually made. It does not, however, afford the real proof, nor can any such proof be properly accepted, unless corroborated by the signature of some duly qualified person, acknowledging the receipt of the money by the North Wilts Banking Company.

It will be very desirable that you should submit to this department the whole of your proposed arrangements in one view, as soon as you are in a condition to adopt them, because we should thereby be in a better condition for giving you our opinion thereon, and our fullest assistance in the matter.

One thing is most important, and that you appear to have adopted. The actuary should at no time, and on no account be permitted to hold the money of the depositors; whatever is done in that respect would be more properly done by a manager or trustee.

In reply to your inquiry whether the trustees would be justified in giving Mr. Jones's security a discharge, on his paying 170 l. 16 s., I can only refer you to my letter of the 23d May, of which I enclose a copy.

MAY I, as an especial favour, ask you for copies of any letters I may have written to you between 16th May and the present time on the subject of our savings bank? Sir, The Vicarage, Bradford, Wilts, 18 June 1855.

I HAVE the honour to forward the accompanying papers, and also a report based upon them, from the trustees and managers. I trust that the steps taken will be judged satisfactory.

It will be necessary for us to sell out about 200 l. from money in the hands of the National Debt Commissioners. Should there be a form on which application is to be made for such sum, I should be obliged if you would forward some copies of it to me.

The accompanying papers are,— a.) Report of proceedings at the last monthly meeting of the trustees and managers of our savings bank.

b.) Appendix, A. B. C., compiled by managers.

c.) Appendix, D., compiled by trustees.

Two trustees audited the accounts in December last, and found precisely the same results as have now been found by the managers.

Summary of Proceedings of a Monthly Meeting of the Trustees and Managers of the Bradford, Wilts, Savings Bank, held on Monday, 11 June 1855.

It appeared from statements laid before the meeting, that since the last meeting two separate investigations had been made into the state of the accounts, with a view of ascertaining the precise amount in which the late actuary was a defaulter, the one by the trustees, the other by a committee of managers, and that the results in each case were identical.

It appeared from the bank ledger, that the amount due to depositors on 24th March last, when the late actuary retired from his office,

was - - - - - - - - - - - -				£.	7,677 14 –
To meet which, there was in the hands of
Commissioners of National Debt	£.	7,333	14	7
In hands of treasurer - - - -		173	3	5
					7,506 18 –
Leaving a deficiency of - -				£.	170 16 –

It appeared also that analyses had been made of the weekly transactions of the bank. The papers which are herewith forwarded will, when compared with the returns made to and in possession of the National Debt Office, show that the late actuary has been in the habit of sending false returns, and of holding considerable sums of money in his hands from time to time. It will be seen, however, that the accounts tested in this manner exhibit a similar amount due to the savings bank from the late actuary, viz., 170*l.* 16*s.*

It may be observed, that the late actuary, on retiring from his office, was requested to give an exact statement of his deficiency. The underwritten one was furnished with the most solemn declaration of its correctness:

In hands of treasurer - - - - - -	£.	173	3 5
Due from actuary - - - - - - -		170	16 –
	£.	343	19 5

The meeting was fully convinced that the sum above stated, and arrived at after the most searching examination of the accounts, carried on by two bodies independently of each other, was the real amount of the deficiency. As, however, undoubted evidence of the fact could not be ascertained before every pass-book belonging to the depositors had been examined and compared with the ledger, it was decided, according to Rule XI. of the institution, which requires "every pass-book to be compared once a year with the bank ledger," formal notice should be at once given to the several depositors of such rule, and a request made that within the next three months the pass-books be produced for such purpose.

It may be observed that, with three exceptions, no discrepancies have been discovered as yet (and opportunities have been already offered for inspecting more than half the pass-books) between the entries in the ledger and the pass-books. These instances are noted in the papers forwarded (see Analysis of Accounts, pp. 44–46, Appendix D). In three several cases the late actuary held money paid by depositors for periods varying from three to nine months. Before retiring from his office he debited himself with those sums, so that they are included in the total deficiency, viz., 170*l.* 16*s.*

The meeting felt that as no further steps could possibly be taken, or any other result arrived at by a professional accountant, it was unnecessary to go to the expense of engaging such services.

With reference to the outstanding balance due from the late actuary, the following resolution was passed:—

"That as it appears that a balance of 170*l.* 16*s.* remains due from the late actuary to the savings bank, a formal demand be made by two trustees and three managers for the same on Mr. James Payne Budgett, the surety of Mr. Joseph Gordon Jones."

Bradford, Wilts.

It appeared, from communications read to the meeting by the chairman, the Rev. W. H. Jones, that he had twice asked the Comptroller-general whether the trustees and managers had any claim for interest lost on monies held by the late actuary from time to time, and had received no definite answer. The inference drawn was, it would be very difficult to establish such a claim, and it was thought right to waive it.

The meeting also approved the steps taken with regard to the newly appointed actuary, and measures adopted for preventing fraud in future, as described in communications addressed by the Rev. W. H. Jones to the Comptroller-general. They observed, in reply to the Comptroller-general's remarks as to the actuary signing the certificate of the money having been paid to the treasurer, that he is required to give proof (as is stated in one of the communications to the National Debt Office) of such payment; viz., by producing the pass-book of the savings bank. For the future, however, every objection will be met by the manager of the North Wilts Banking Company countersigning the actuary's certificate.

It was resolved that a statement of the proceedings be forwarded to the Comptroller-general, signed by one trustee, and not less than two managers, each of whom had gone through the accounts, and none of whom had signed any of the weekly returns forwarded up to the 27th day of March last to the National Debt Office.

SOUTHPORT SAVINGS BANK.

Southport.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 30 April 1855.

IN your return for the week ending 14th April you have taken credit for 200*l.* as invested with the Commissioners, which up to the present date does not appear to have been done; I am therefore desired to request that you will inform me why the 200*l.* has not been dealt with as stated in your return.

I am, &c.

Trustees of the Savings Bank, Southport. (signed) Jas. Higham.

Sir, Savings Bank, Southport, 14 May 1855.

ON receipt of your letter to the trustees of the 30th April, I, as treasurer, immediately called together the trustees and managers of the bank, to investigate the matter referred to; and we found that the actuary had omitted to pay in the sum of 200*l.* to the Branch Bank of England at Liverpool for investment with the Commissioners, as he ought to have done, and which I believed to have been done, as stated in the return for the week ended 13th April.

This is the explanation of the error, and it is the first that has occurred.

The actuary has since resigned, and Mr. Ralph Holding has been appointed actuary in his stead.

On the resignation of the actuary, the trustees and managers appointed two of their body to examine and audit the books of the savings bank prior to the appointment of the new actuary, and they find no other error in the accounts than the omission, before referred to, of the payment of that 200*l.* into the Liverpool Branch Bank.

You are probably aware that the sum of 300*l.*, for which a draft, signed by two trustees, Messrs. Wright and Hamilton, was sent up to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, has not been remitted by the said Commissioners. We presume that you have been waiting an answer to your letter of the 30th April before you remitted it.

I must now beg that the said sum of 300*l.*, according to the draft sent up, be remitted without delay, as it is wanted to pay to depositors on Friday, the next banking day.

Two large payments, of above 100*l.* each, due last Friday, had to be deferred, and the parties to wait, though at some inconvenience, another week for their money.

With respect, however, to the more important matter which forms the subject of Mr. Hesketh's communication, I am to request that you will inform me whether the 200*l.* in question has been repaid by your late actuary to the funds of the savings bank.

Sir, Savings Bank, Southport.

IN reply to your letter of the 15th May, I have to state that nearly one-half of the 200*l.* in question has been repaid by the late actuary to the funds of the savings bank, and I expect to meet him this evening and receive a further payment by him to the said bank.

REFERRING to the former communications which have taken place between you and this department on the subject of the misappropriation of 200*l.* by the actuary of your savings bank, and to your letter of the 17th instant, in which you state that nearly one half of the sum had been repaid by him, and that you expected to meet him that evening and to receive a further payment from him on account of the bank, I am now to request you will inform me whether any further payment has been made according to your anticipation, and what is at the present time the state of the account, and what steps you propose to take for enforcing immediate payment of any balance, if any shall still be due.

You are aware that a bond for 100*l.* was given by Mr. Mawdesley. It is deposited in this office, and shall be forthcoming, if necessary, on your application.

It is important also to learn what arrangement the trustees and managers have made, or have under consideration, to prevent the possibility of such a fraud in future. In this case, it is undoubtedly to be regretted that it should not have been at once discovered by the simple process of ascertaining by a certificate from the Branch Bank of the Bank of England at Liverpool that the actuary had strictly and at once fulfilled the orders given to him; for in such cases nothing should be left to mere confidence.

It would indeed appear that unless your attention had been drawn to the matter by a communication from this office, pointing out that in a document signed by the actuary and Mr. Smith, one of the managers, a remittance to this office of 200 l. was included which had never been received, the fraud might still have remained undiscovered, and further frauds of the same kind have been practised.

The trustees will no doubt take care that a proper system shall be laid down before a successor to Mr. Mawdesley shall be appointed, and that due superintendence over every transaction shall be exercised thereafter. It appears to the Commissioners, as one arrangement very necessary to be adopted, that the actuary should be prohibited from receiving or holding any money belonging to the depositors, on pain of immediate dismissal.

Sir, Savings Bank, Southport, 22 May 1855.

I HAVE only time to-day for one line in answer to yours just received, which I will reply to more at length to-morrow. I am happy to say I did receive the further payment from the late actuary to which I alluded in my last, and I have since received additional payments from time to time, so that his debt is now reduced to 35 l. 1 s. 7 d.; and I am in hopes of this sum being liquidated in two or three days, without the necessity of legal proceedings. The Branch Bank of England at Liverpool has not been in the habit of giving any acknowledgment at the time for the money when paid in to them by the actuary, and I understand they objected so to do. The trustees and managers are taking measures to prevent in future the possibility of such an error as the one we lament quite as much as you can. But I do not believe the actuary had any intention of defrauding the savings bank of the 200 l.

Believe me, &c.

(signed) Charles Hesketh, Treasurer.

Sir, Savings Bank, Southport, 23 May 1855.

IN further reply to yours of the 21st May, I have to refer you to my letter of yesterday, in which I stated the amount to which the actuary's debt was reduced, and also the fact that the Liverpool Branch of the Bank of England were not in the habit of giving the actuary any receipt or memorandum at the time he paid monies into their bank, and I believe they objected to give any such memorandum. Consequently we have had to wait for the acknowledgment from London before we could actually know the money was duly paid. There has, however, never been any error committed by the late actuary in this matter at any time since his long connexion with the bank until the one now before us, and which is now so nearly paid off. We are proposing to leave no money in the hands of the new actuary, but to have it paid regularly after each savings bank day into the bank of Messrs. Lawe & Co. (who have now a bank at Southport), and I have as treasurer already opened an account with them for that purpose. I am not aware that the trustees and managers have neglected proper vigilance over the conduct of their actuary; at least it has been their aim to be watchful, and they have taken some pains to carry out that object. The instance where the error has occurred could not have happened had the Liverpool Branch of the Bank of England given each time a simple memorandum, saying such a sum had been paid in.

Our new arrangement, which was not feasible when the former was made, as we had then no bank at Southport, will, by paying the deposits after each day into Lawe & Co.'s, prevent the actuary having the opportunity of committing the same irregularity, and we shall have no need to go through the Branch Bank of England at Liverpool any more. I am going to Liverpool to-day to receive the 300 l. you remitted from London.

Allow me to assure you that the trustees will take every pains to keep a vigilant eye and strict hand over their actuary, and all the proceedings of their bank. I am obliged to you for your drawing our attention in your last letter to the great necessity of so doing; at the same time I must in our own justification, state that we have, from the proceedings at other savings banks, been for some years alive to that necessity, and not disposed to act on mere confidence in any official; and I hope the future transactions of our savings bank will show that we are thus, as we ought to be, cautious and vigilant.

I remain, &c.

Sir, Savings Bank, Southport, 26 May 1855.

I HAVE the pleasure to inform you that the late actuary has now paid up the whole of the amount which he was indebted to the savings bank, and this without the necessity of taking legal proceedings.

I remain, &c,
(signed) Charles Hesketh,
Treasurer.

Sir, National Debt Office, 2 June 1855.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letters of 23d and 26th May, from the former of which it appears that your late actuary has repaid the whole amount of 200 l. which he had abstracted upon the particular occasion which attracted attention in this office, and I shall be glad to learn whether the trustees are now entirely satisfied that no other instance of abstraction of funds has at any time taken place, but that the whole of the monies paid in by depositors have been duly and properly accounted for.

I am at the same time to request that the trustees, when they shall have appointed another actuary, and shall have prescribed such new arrangements as will in their opinion place a complete check upon all the pecuniary transactions of the savings bank, will then have the goodness to state to the Commissioners what they shall finally have done in this matter for the protection of the depositors.

This is the more desirable and necessary, because at this very time proceedings are going on in two other banks in which frauds have been committed by the actuaries, owing, it is believed, to the neglect of the superior authorities to exercise that superintendence which they voluntarily undertake to its proper extent, trusting too much to confidence.

I have, &c.
The Rev. C. Hesketh, Southport. (signed) A. Y. Spearman.

I write this from Ross, having got your letter as I was leaving home, which will account for this post-mark.

North Meols Savings Bank, Southport,
Sir, 5 June 1855.

IN thanking you for your letter of the 2d June, I must again repeat that I do not think the recent error of the 200*l.* (repaid by the late actuary) arose from over-confidence or want of vigilance in the trustees, but from the fact that the Branch Bank of England at Liverpool never gave any memorandum or receipt at the time the money was paid, and consequently we never could know, till a receipt arrived from London, whether it was actually so paid or not.

I was not, therefore, at all surprised that the error should first come to light through the weekly return which I sent to your office, as that would naturally show whether the sum said to be remitted to the Commissioners agreed with the sum actually remitted.

I think

Southport.

I think the trustees and managers are satisfied that the error of the 200 l. was a solitary instance on the part of the late actuary, as the books of the savings bank were examined by auditors on his resignation, and found correct.

I may add, that every year a notice is published, calling on the depositors to send in their books to the auditors for examination, when every depositor's book so sent in is examined and compared with the ledger, and then signed by the auditor.

A manager is present every banking day with the actuary when money is deposited or withdrawn, and such manager attests each transaction with his initials or signature in the depositor's book. The managers take this duty in rotation.

No money is allowed to be deposited or withdrawn except at the banking hours.

I do not see, therefore, where the late actuary can have got wrong, and, in justice to him, I must again say that I do not believe that he intended, even in respect to the 200 l., to wrong the bank of the money.

The possibility of any future actuary getting money in the same way will, I think, be effectually provided against by the plan we have now adopted of paying the balance at the close of each day's business into the bank of Lawe & Co., of Preston, who have a branch in Southport, to my account, as treasurer of the savings bank. Thus no money remains at all in the actuary's hands; and when the proper forms for changing our agents are completed, it is our purpose to send up the money through Lawe & Co.'s London agents, Jones, Loyd & Co., for investment with the Commissioners regularly, reserving in Lawe & Co.'s only a sufficient sum to meet requisite payments to depositors.

I think, sir, you will see that we have not been negligent, or foolishly, and therefore improperly, confiding; but that we are nevertheless desirous of adopting any extra step that may increase the safety of the depositors' money, and therefore have adopted this improved mode of remitting the money to London, thus removing the only opportunity in which, as far as we can see, the actuary could get wrong.

I do not wonder at your being urgent in pressing caution, in consequence of the frauds in other savings banks.

Believe me, &c.

Yoxall and Barton-under-Needwood.

Sir, Burton, 11 May 1855.

I AM directed by the trustees and managers of the savings bank at Yoxall and Barton-under-Needwood, in the county of Stafford, to inform you that on Monday last Edward Cleavin, the secretary, absconded, and that, as far as we have at present been able to ascertain, he is a defaulter to the amount of 87 l. 6 s. 1 d.

He had a guarantee policy to the amount of 1,000 l. from the British Guarantee Association, No. 9, Waterloo-place, London, but that, unfortunately, was not renewed on the 5th day of April last, and we shall only be able to recover from that office 16 l. 6 s., purloined on the 12th March last, as the residue of the defalcations took place on the 23d April.

The trustees and managers respectfully request the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt to allow a sufficient sum from the surplus fund to make good the deficiency.

It appears Cleavin has omitted to transmit the usual weekly statements for several of the last weeks. If you will be so kind as inform me when he made the last return, I will make up and forward to you the whole in arrear.

Sir Alexander Spearman, Bart.,
Comptroller-General,
&c. &c.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 16 May 1855.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter of the 11th instant, stating that Edward Cleavin, employed by you as secretary of your savings bank, absconded on Monday last, and that, as far as you can ascertain, he is a defaulter to the amount of 87 l. 6 s. 1 d.

You add that he had a guarantee policy from the British Guarantee Association, but that that, unfortunately, was not renewed on the 5th April last, and that, consequently, you will only be able to recover from that office 16 l. 6 s., purloined on the 12th March last, as the residue of the defalcation took place on the 23d April. Under these circumstances you request the Commissioners will allow a sufficient sum to be withdrawn from the separate surplus fund to make good the deficiency.

Before the Commissioners will feel justified in making any such order, it will be necessary that information should be furnished upon the following points; viz.,

1st. How it has happened, and who is responsible for the neglect, that the trustees and managers, under whose superintendence the savings bank is carried on, and whose duty it is to superintend their officers and protect their depositors, did not take due care and pains to enforce the renewal of the guarantee policy, of the approaching expiration of which they must have been aware?

2d. Why no attention was paid by the trustees and managers to the remonstrances from this office against the great delays which took place in the transmission of the weekly returns? because the Commissioners conceive that if those representations had been attended to, and the due delivery of such returns had been enforced by the trustees and managers, who alone have power and authority over their officers, the defalcation might probably never have occurred.

3d. Whether the accounts have been so thoroughly investigated as to show, positively, that no defalcation beyond the sum above mentioned has actually taken place?

4th. What steps the trustees and managers propose to take to prevent the possibility of such frauds hereafter? – One step which the Commissioners consider to be of great importance is this, that the officers of the bank should be prohibited, on pain of instant dismissal, from receiving or having in custody any money, at any time, on account of the depositors.

The weekly returns from your bank have never been rendered since the 12th of June last year, notwithstanding the applications of this office, calling your special attention to the default; and I trust that you will now make such arrangements as will enforce the regular delivery of them in future, together with the whole now in arrear.

It is by inattention to matters of account, requiring constant superintendence, that the door is so often opened to the practice of frauds, which naturally bring discredit on the system of superintendence and management of savings banks, inflicting at the same time an injury on the depositors to which they ought not to be exposed.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 2 June 1855.

On the 11th May you reported that your late actuary had absconded, and I addressed a letter to you on the subject on the 15th May; since that day I have received no further communication from you on the subject.

I have now, therefore, to request you will furnish me with a statement of what proceedings you may since have taken on the subject.

I am desired by the trustees and managers of the Yoxall and Barton Savings Bank to acknowledge the receipt of your letters, dated respectively 16th May and 2d June.

They desire to apologise for the apparent neglect in not replying promptly to your letter of 16th May; the delay has been unavoidable.

I am desired to say that a statement of the proceedings they have since taken will be forwarded to you in a few days.

On the 19th May the trustees and managers appointed me to the office of secretary.

I shall be glad to receive blank forms for the weekly returns, &c.

Sir, Burton-upon-Trent, 8 June 1855.

On behalf of the trustees and managers of the Yoxall and Barton-under-Needwood Savings Bank, I beg leave to state in reply to your letter of the 16th May, they deeply regret that an overplaced confidence in the late secretary should have prevented his dismissal; for although he was procrastinating, they had not reason to suspect him of dishonesty.

On the 26th February last the auditor examined the books up to the 20th November 1854, and found them correct; and it was not until immediately afterwards, viz., on the 12th March, that he first retained the sum of 16 l. 6 s., by an adroit omission of one item in the cash account. The trustees and managers submit that they are not liable to blame in the second instance: the manager present on the 23d April sealed up (as had been the practice) the sum of 88 l. 15 s., and directed the packet to the treasurer; Edward Cleavin afterwards opened it, and took from it the sum of 77 l. 5 s. 1 d., which was not discovered until the packet was delivered to the treasurer on the day Cleavin had absconded.

In reference to the non-renewal of the guarantee policy, I have to inform you that on the request of the trustees and managers it was renewed for the year ending Lady-day 1855; the receipt was dated July 1854, and they were under the impression that it was a Midsummer policy, and not renewable before Midsummer 1855.

Under these circumstances, the trustees and managers trust that the Commissioners will not object to a withdrawment of a sufficient sum from the separate surplus fund to meet the deficiency.

The trustees and managers have determined upon regularly giving the strictest attention to the future transactions; and they especially take note of your remark, "That the officers of the bank should be prohibited, on pain of instant dismissal, from receiving or having in custody any money at any time on account of the depositors."

The accounts up to 23d April last have been examined by the auditor, and he has reported that the defalcation does not exceed the sum named in the letter addressed to you on 11th May.

At present the Guarantee Association dispute the payment of the 16*l.* 6*s.*

The trustees and managers have appointed Mr. Thomas Spooner to the office of secretary. His character is good, and he is fully competent to the duties. He has been directed to find security to the amount of 500*l.*

All the books and papers are now in his possession, and he has been instructed to lose no time in forwarding to you the weekly returns remaining in arrear. I believe they will be found amongst the papers, regularly signed. After those in arrear have been sent in, the returns will be promptly forwarded each week.

I wish further to state, that the trustees and managers find that much of the correspondence from the National Debt Office has never been laid before them, the late secretary having withheld it.

The Return required by the Order of the House of Commons has been filled up, and awaits only the signature of one party, which will be obtained on Monday next.

The secretary will forthwith prepare the interest account, a form for which he yesterday found amongst the papers.

I AM instructed to inform you that the trustees and managers met on the 19th of November, and directed me to issue a notice requiring the production of the duplicate of every depositor, in order to ascertain the full extent of the defalcations of the late secretary, their attention having been called to a transaction which appeared to have been irregular.

On the 29th and 30th November and 1st December about 500 out of 550 duplicates were produced, all of which were found correct, except three. It appears that the late secretary had, by means of false entries and forgeries of the signatures of directors, purloined three sums, amounting together to 115*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.*; making, with the sum of 105*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*, previously shown in the weekly returns, a total of 221*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*, which will appear on this week's return.

The three sums recently discovered were all purloined during the currency of the policy of the British Guarantee Association; and I am now in correspondence with the association and with Mr. J. Tidd Pratt as to the payment thereof.

The trustees and managers again met yesterday, and directed me to make this communication.

As to the Defalcations of Edward Cleavin, late Secretary.

Sir, London, 25 February 1856.

I HAVE this day had an interview with Mr. Forrest, and my award is, that the Guarantee Association pay you 85*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.* in respect of your claim of 135*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.* The trustees should state to the Commissioners the substance of my award, and request to be allowed to draw on the surplus fund to make good the difference.

EXTRACT from Minutes of the Annual Meeting of the Trustees and Managers on 27 February 1856.

THE correspondence that had passed relative to the late secretary's defalcations was read to the meeting, and the award of Mr. Tidd Pratt as to the amount that should be paid by the British Guarantee Association (85*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.*) was accepted in settlement of the claim upon them.

Ordered, that on the suggestion of Mr. Tidd Pratt, the Commissioners be requested to permit the withdrawal of the balance of the late secretary's deficiency from the separate surplus fund, and that a memorial to that effect be prepared, which should also request the withdrawment from the same fund of the amount of extraordinary expenses incurred in the recent investigation of the accounts.

As to the Defalcations of the late Secretary, Edward Cleavin.

Sir, Burton-upon-Trent, 22 July 1856.

I AM requested by the trustees and managers of this savings bank to apply, through you, to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, for permission to draw on the surplus fund of the said savings bank to the amount of 138*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.*, being a balance of the loss which this savings bank has sustained by the defalcations of the said late secretary, after deducting the amount of salary due to the said secretary at the time he absconded—the sum of 84*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.* received from the British Guarantee Association, under an award of J. Tidd Pratt, esq.; and 7*l.* 5*s.* the amount of a cheque not presented by Cleavin to the treasurer.

A copy of the said statement, and of a letter from J. Tidd Pratt, esq., is transmitted herewith.

I am especially requested to call your attention to the said statement, in which it will be seen that Cleavin had recourse to forgery, and all the most artful and desperate means in carrying out his fraudulent purposes. That although the managers had taken the precaution to seal up, with their common seal, the money received each banking day, and convey it to their treasurer at the Union Bank at Burton-upon-Trent, by one of their own body, yet, on the 12th March 1855, Cleavin contrived, during the brief absence of a manager, to break the seal, and abstract from the package 78*l.* 5*s.* 1*d.*, and seal it up again; and when the manager arrived at the Burton Union Bank, the package was found to contain only 10*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*, instead of 88*l.* 15*s.*; and on his immediate return, he found Cleavin had absconded.

I am further directed to add, that the trustees and managers have, from time to time, adopted every means in their power to prevent fraud. They have insisted that no money should be received or paid by the secretary, and no business transacted out of banking hours, nor without the presence of managers. Yet such was the cunning and determined audacity of Cleavin, the reckless manner in which he committed forgery and practised on the unsuspecting depositor, that the strictest care and attention proved insufficient to guard against it; and it is believed that if stringent rules had not been adopted, he would have got possession of and absconded with a very large sum.

The National Debt Commissioners are therefore respectfully requested to give the case a favourable consideration, and to permit the withdrawal from the separate surplus fund of the amount required to place the bank in a solvent position.

Sir, National Debt Office, 25 July 1856.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter of the 22d instant, and have to inform you, that however much the Commissioners may lament the circumstances which have led you to make the application therein contained, they will not withhold the issue of the necessary form to enable you to draw upon the separate surplus fund for the sum required, viz. 138*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.*

Unless, however, the money should be required at the savings bank, the better course will be to transfer 138*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.* from the account of the separate surplus fund in the books of this office to the account of the general fund of your savings bank, bearing interest, and that course will be taken if you prefer it, and send back the form I now enclose.

Sir, National Debt Office, 13 November 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th October. There will be no objection on the part of this department to the application, out of the separate surplus fund, of such an amount as may be necessary to procure proper accommodation for carrying on the business of the savings bank; but if it shall be proposed to couple such an arrangement with provision for the residence of the actuary, then the Commissioners will be unable to consent to any issue of money having that object in view. The provision of a building, or a part of a building, in which to carry on the business with the depositors, and for the safe custody of the books and papers, is clearly a purpose to which the separate surplus fund may be applied; but the law officers of the Crown have given their opinion that the providing of a residence for an actuary is not such a purpose within the intent and meaning of the Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, and the Commissioners, since the opinion of the law officers of the Crown was made known to them, have been invariably governed by that interpretation of the statute. It will be necessary, however, before any contract or engagement is entered into, either for land or for erecting a building, or for purchase of a building already erected, that the whole of the circumstances shall be brought by the trustees and managers under the official consideration of the Commissioners, and that their official sanction shall be given to the proposed arrangement in its detail.

With respect to the second question, viz., whether the Commissioners would object to the issue from the separate surplus fund of a gratuity not exceeding 50*l.* to the retiring actuary, after 37 years' service, I am to state, that there would have been no objection to the issue of a sum within the limit you state, as such gratuity, if this department had been entirely satisfied with the exactitude and regularity with which the returns and accounts called for had been rendered from time to time. In the case of the savings bank at Rugby, it is my duty, however, to say that this department is not so satisfied.

The Return ordered by the House of Commons on 9th May 1855, for the year ended 20th November 1854, which Order was communicated from this office to the trustees by circular, dated 14th May 1855, was never furnished at all, notwithstanding repeated applications; and the Commissioners were obliged to return the savings bank to the House of Commons as in default. The like Return, ordered by the House on 11th July 1856, for the year ended 20th November 1855, although repeatedly applied for, has not yet reached this office. The Return of accounts opened and closed during the years ended 20th November 1854 and 1855; the Return of friendly societies and charitable societies depositing their funds in the savings bank in the year ended 20th November 1854; and the certificate required from trustees and managers as to their continued satisfaction with the state of the security given by their officers up to 20th November 1855, all called for by letter from this department at the end of October in the years 1854 and 1855, and since applied for on several occasions, have never been furnished. The Commissioners consider that it is the imperative duty of the actuary of a savings bank, unless he shall be forbidden to do so by the trustees and managers, to take care that all accounts, and the documents called for by this department, and most especially such as are ordered by the House of Commons, are furnished correctly and rapidly. The Commissioners cannot suppose that, in the cases referred to, the trustees and managers have at any time or in any manner refused to furnish the accounts in question; and under these circumstances, it certainly does not appear to the Commissioners that they would be justified in sanctioning the grant of a gratuity to the actuary.

I am at the same time, now that I have the honour of addressing you personally, to request that the returns in question may be furnished as soon as possible, to complete the series in the books of this office.

Sir, Leamington Hastings, Rugby, 14 November 1856.

I HAVE the honour of transmitting to you the bond of Mr. Hefford, for the due execution of his office as clerk to the Rugby Savings Bank, to which he has recently been elected.

It will be with regret equal to my own that the trustees and managers of that institution will learn that their retiring clerk has defeated their wishes towards him by irregularities such as your letter of yesterday's date discloses.

Since, however, you require from me certain returns which he has neglected to make, and moreover a general meeting of the trustees and managers is appointed for Tuesday next, when the consideration of your letter will form a part of the proceedings, it would be very desirable that so many of the forms or circulars which the clerk has neglected, and which you can conveniently send, should be in our hands, and that we may be sure to have them I shall feel obliged if they can be addressed to me.

As an almost constant attendant at the meeting of the trustees, I have no recollection that within the periods stated any other forms or requisitions than the ordinary ones have been submitted; and you will, perhaps, have the goodness to state whether your requisitions were addressed to the trustees or managers, or ought to have been laid before them.

I am, &c.

Sir, National Debt Office, 15 November 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt this morning of your letter of yesterday. I enclose copies of the forms regularly called for, for years respectively ending 20 November 1854 and 20 November 1855, and I have marked on the enclosures the several subsequent applications, which were unsuccessful in procuring the accounts. The letters from this department are always, as a rule, addressed to the trustees, and the envelopes are always directed to the trustees in their collective character at the savings banks. On the last occasion I wrote, as you will see, directly to the actuary himself, and requested an answer at once, as I did to the actuaries of some other savings banks, that there might be no sort of excuse. I cannot learn, however, that any reply has reached this department from Rugby; and I will not conceal from you that where there is such neglect in these matters, the impression is naturally not very favourable to the management of the savings bank, although it may probably be that the trustees and managers know nothing of what is going on, which must be the case if their officers shall keep back communications addressed to them from this office.

I have, &c.

Leamington Hastings, Rugby,

Sir, 17. November 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Forms of Return which are stated to have been neglected by the trustees and managers of the Rugby Savings Bank, and to thank you for your prompt attention to my request for them. I beg to assure you at the same time that I am very confident that not any of them have ever reached and been brought to the notice of the trustees and managers of that institution; but they will be laid before a special general meeting to-morrow, and the matter thoroughly investigated.

I am, &c.

Leamington Hastings, Rugby,
Sir, 10 March 1857.

I HAVE the honour of transmitting to you herewith the report of Mr. Grey on the affairs of the Rugby Savings Bank, from which it appears that many frauds, and of various kinds, have been practised upon that institution by the late actuary, Mr. Essex, and that fictitious accounts have been rendered by him, which, by placing money actually due to depositors to the account of an imaginary surplus fund bearing no interest, have reduced the interest accruing to the bank; and the two causes operating together have caused a deficiency of funds to the amount of 1,438*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*, against which, however, there is a nominal surplus fund of 811*l.* 7*s.* 5*d.* in the hands of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, leaving a real deficiency of 627*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.*, and we beg to ask your advice in this state of our affairs,—

First, as to obtaining the release of the nominal surplus fund.

Whether it will be required of us (taking the circumstances in Mr. Grey's Report into consideration) to expend farther sums in examining the accounts?

Whether it will be required of us to proceed against the late actuary criminally, and who must prosecute, he having admitted his guilt?

Whether it will be advisable to recover from his surety, and who must put the bond in force, supposing it to be given to yourself?

In the event of its being recommended to call in the books, 500 or 600 of them having already been examined, and as they are still coming in at the rate of about 50 a week, and all at present having been found correct, and its being considered that such a measure at this present time might be prejudicial to the interest of the institution, would there be any objection to its postponement until the number not examined should be so reduced that they might be called in otherwise than by public advertisement?

And would any other steps be necessary to procure the release of the nominal surplus fund?

Secondly, as to the measures of relief and sanction the trustees and managers may expect from the Commissioners towards enabling them to replace the deficiency,—

May they expect interest to be allowed on the nominal surplus fund from 20th November 1856?

May they hope, under any circumstances, that interest can be allowed on the same for the year ending 20th November 1856, no return of a surplus having been made for that year?

Provided only two-thirds of the deficiency can be raised by contributions, would the Commissioners allow a guarantee fund to be placed under their control as security for the remainder to be repaid from time to time, as a surplus may arise?

I am, &c.

COPY of Mr. GREY'S REPORT on the RUGBY SAVINGS BANK.

48, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, London,
Gentlemen, 3 March 1857.

I HAVE made as strict an examination of the accounts of your bank as the limited instructions I received from you will admit of.

The result is, that I find an apparent deficiency of 1,438 l. 11 s. 10 d. in those funds of your institution which are under your control.

But you have been gradually accumulating in the hands of the Commissioners of the National Debt, and placing out of your reach, without interest, what you have supposed to be a surplus fund, now amounting to 811 l. 7 s. 5 d. This appears to me to have been done on erroneous data, furnished to you by your former actuary. The deficiency I have pointed out proves the supposed surplus, to be fictitious. Whatever part of it may at any time have been a real surplus has long since ceased to be so, and the whole amount ought to have been retransferred to the depositors' fund, from which it was taken.

Rugby.

If you can satisfy the National Debt Commissioners on this point, they may, perhaps, order it to be restored to the general fund; and in that case the deficiency will be reduced to 627*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.*

I have been given to understand that Mr. Essex, your former actuary, has been in the habit of making up your annual statement in a very untruthful manner; that he has not for many years taken the trouble to put together the interest allowed to each depositor during each year, in order to ascertain the correct amount of the whole, as required for the annual statements, but has estimated it at the rate of interest allowed by the bank on the average amount which he supposed to have been on deposit during the year; and that he has not even verified this supposition by scheduling the balances at the end of each year, and ascertaining the real amount of them at that time, but has assumed that the amount in investment and in the treasurer's hands was the amount due to the depositors: thus founding one important result on the mere estimate of another, and annually fabricating the classified statements of balances required by the National Debt Office, so as to make it appear that the liabilities of the bank corresponded exactly with its assets.

The unfaithfulness of this mode of performing the duty he has undertaken is apparent; but I had thought it possible that he had misled both you and himself by these fictitious calculations into imagining the reality of a surplus, when, in fact, the bank was gradually becoming insolvent.

A closer examination, however, of the books and accounts, brings me to the conclusion that indolence and unfaithfulness in preparing the accounts are not the only cause of the deficiency.

I proposed to your committee to ascertain the amount which appeared to be deficient on the 20th of November 1856, and to trace backwards, by a careful examination of each year's proceedings, so as to show in each year any alteration in the amount, and the cause of it.

I commenced this process with the year from the 20th November 1855 to te 20th November 1856. The deficiency on the 20th November 1856 was 1,438*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*; that on the 20th November 1855 was 1,432*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* It appears, therefore, that there has been an increase of the deficiency in the course of the year, which is attributable to the circumstance that the actual profit of the bank, arising from the difference between the interest obtained from the National Debt Office and that allowed to depositors, is less by 5*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* than the expenses of management during the year. Mr. Essex did not make up the annual statement to the 20th November 1856 before he ceased to be actuary; had he done so, he would no doubt have continued to conceal the difference between the assets and liabilities, as he had done before, by falsifying the classified statement of balances.

That which he prepared to the 20th of November 1855 must be entirely fictitious, as the amount is nearly 1,500*l.* short of the truth.

I had intended to have proceeded with the examination of the year from the 20th November 1854 to the 20th November 1855, but the Rev. Mr. Sitwell requested that, instead of doing so, I would examine the year from 20th November 1842 to 20th November 1843. His request was complied with, though it quite disturbed the course of examination which had been arranged; but it has led to results of a very important character.

The proceedings of 1855-56 were found to be quite regular; the ledger entries agreed with those of the cash-book, and the ledger balances were properly brought down or carried forward. Not so, however, in 1842-43: in that year two cases have been found in which larger balances are brought down than those standing in the preceding accounts; in one case by 31*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*, in another by 20*l.* This has the appearance of having been done to cover deposits received, but not accounted for in the cash-book, and therefore abstracted from the funds of the bank.

Two other cases have also been found in which money has been credited to depositors' accounts in the ledger, one of 10*l.* the other of 5*l.*, of which no trace can be found in the cash-book; these sums, therefore, it is quite clear, have been withheld from the funds of the bank.

On adding up the amount of interest allowed to each depositor in the year 1842-43, it appears that about 20*l.* more was placed to their credit during that year than is charged in the annual statement. The profit of the year is thus exaggerated in the annual statement, and the fictitious surplus increased; whilst the the sum assumed to be due to depositors is made to appear less than it is, and the actual deficiency becomes greater by the 20 l. thus miscalculated.

A deficiency had arisen before 1843; on the 20th of November in that year it amounted to 141 l. 10 s. 5 d. The classified statement of balances in that year (like that of November 1855) is entirely fictitious, being less by 250 l. than the real balances amount to: the classes are evidently arranged to correspond with the actual assets at that time.

By a singular chance, another very important circumstance has been discovered. On turning over the ledger from 1843 to 1855, with a view to ascertain how the balances had generally been carried forward from one ledger to another, it was observed that on one account a balance of 48 l. 17 s. 2 d. stood to the credit of a depositor on the 20th November 1848 which had not been brought down in that folio, and that there was no reference showing that it had been carried forward elsewhere; search was made for it, and the account was found in another folio of the same ledger, but with a much larger balance to the credit. Three payments charged to the depositor in the former folio, viz. one of 60 l. and two of 40 l. each (together 140 l.), having been omitted in the balance carried to the new folio, there is no doubt that these three payments had been made to somebody; they appear in the cash-book at the dates entered in the ledger, and cheques for them appear by the banker's book to have been paid.

The account is again carried forward in another ledger, where it is closed on the 3d of January 1852 by a final payment of 200 l. 17 s. 3 d., including the 140 l. previously charged, which has thus been paid twice over.

The depositor's pass-book has been found among those closed in 1852. It does not contain the three payments amounting to 140 l. A part of the account in the depositor's book has been cancelled, and re-written on another page, and the general appearance of the book makes it highly necessary that an inquiry should be instituted whether this large double payment has been accidental; and if not, by what means it has been surreptitiously obtained. This sum of 140 l. of course accounts for so much of the deficiency. With this fact and the irregularities of 1842–43 before me, it is impossible not to suppose that there may be others of the same character between 1843 and 1855.

You have limited me to the examination of two years' accounts, which have already occupied 10 days of unremitting labour. I see no means of ascertaining satisfactorily the whole cause of the deficiency but by a similar examination of the whole of the accounts, not only from 1843 to 1855, but for several years prior to 1843. This, however, would occupy nearly three months, and would cost at least 120 l. beyond what has already been incurred.

What has been done only enables me to report to you the simple fact that there appears by the books to be the deficiency I have mentioned of 1,438 l. 11 s. 10 d. How the greater part of it arose can only be fully explained by the further examination I have spoken of. As the ledgers have evidently been falsified in several instances, I cannot even pledge myself to the positive correctness of the sum stated. The only safe means of ascertaining the real liabilities of the bank are, to call in the depositors' books, and have each carefully compared with the ledgers, and the course I should certainly recommend.

Whether this statement will be sufficient to induce the Commissioners of the National Debt to give back to the general fund the separate fund which was supposed to be surplus, but proves to be not so, I cannot tell.

If you can be relieved of this part of your deficiency, I should not advise you to increase your liabilities by a lengthened investigation, but, if practicable, to make up the difference, and to place the bank as soon as possible in the hands of the Government.

A Bill is now on the table of the House of Commons for the amendment of the savings bank law, which purposes to give, on certain conditions, to every savings bank desiring it, the guarantee of the Government, not only of the sums invested by the trustees, but also of every depositor's balance, and thus to relieve trustees and managers from all future responsibility; but I have reason to know that the Government will not thus take under its wing any bank which cannot satisfactorily prove that it is perfectly solvent.

I am, &c.

Rugby.

Sir, National Debt Office, 14 March 1857.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter of 10th instant, transmitting copy of the report made by Mr. Grey, who has been employed by the trustees and managers of the savings bank at Rugby to investigate the accounts of the savings bank, in consequence of the defalcation which has been discovered, arising from the errors made and the frauds practised by the late actuary, and in which letter you ask for advice on the state of the affairs of the savings bank.

So far as I can at present judge, it appears to me to be unnecessary at this time, at all events, to carry on any further investigation into the accounts. That may become necessary hereafter, but enough is disclosed by the steps already taken to make it incumbent, I think, upon the trustees and managers, to have recourse to the really and only effectual mode of ascertaining what is the amount lost to the funds of the savings bank by the errors and frauds of the actuary. The only true and certain mode of arriving at a knowledge of the facts of the case in that respect, will be by comparison of the whole of the books of the depositors with the ledgers, and I confess my opinion is, that that step should be taken as soon as possible.

It is satisfactory to learn that the books which have already been presented have been found to be correct; but, until all have been examined, the trustees and managers can never be certain that they are dealing with the whole matter. I cannot doubt for a moment that the trustees and managers will take care that no loss shall ultimately fall upon the depositors; and although some anxiety may be excited in the minds of some few depositors by the announcement of an unusual measure of this kind, that anxiety would surely be entirely quieted if it were publicly made known at the same time, that that step was taken as a measure of precaution, and an assurance were at the same moment published, that the trustees and managers would guarantee the depositors that no loss should under any circumstances fall upon them. I think indeed that a step so announced, and accompanied by such an assurance, would have a decided tendency to strengthen the bank, and to give additional confidence to the depositors.

With respect to the sum now at the credit of the separate surplus fund, I beg leave to state that, when the whole extent of the defalcation shall be discovered, and the trustees and managers shall have explained to this department the arrangements by which they propose to meet the deficiency which would still remain, after carrying to the account of the bank the separate surplus, there will be no difficulty in placing that surplus at the credit of the bank, carrying interest from the commencement of the present savings bank year; beyond that date it would not be possible to go. There can be no doubt that it will be proper to put the bond of the actuary in suit, as against himself and his sureties, to the full extent of the defalcation which can be proved against him. That, however, is really a question which should be submitted for legal advice. I enclose copy of the bond; if it is to be put in suit, the original shall be forwarded to you. Whether the trustees and managers ought or ought not to proceed criminally against the late actuary, depends entirely upon the determination of the trustees and managers themselves. They will have to consider how far justice requires that that step should be taken, and whether they can give legal evidence sufficient to establish such a charge.

If the trustees and managers, after ascertaining what sum in addition to the separate surplus fund must be provided in order that all the depositors may be fully protected, shall then find themselves unable by contributions to raise that amount, and shall desire to make up the balance unprovided for by a guarantee fund, by which I understand an actual payment, with a right reserved to the parties advancing the money to be repaid out of the future profits of the bank, I beg leave to state that I do not see any objection to such an arrangement. The amount paid would, of course, be lodged in this office to the account of the savings bank, and would bear interest for the depositors as part of the assets of the bank. Once deposited, however, no repayment of any part of it could be made, except in so far as the annual income, after defraying every charge for management, would allow, and that would be determined by the trustees and managers from year to year; but although I should not object to this, I am bound to say that such an arrangement might be the cause of much difficulty at a future period, since by no act of the present trustees and managers can they bind their successors in such a matter. Rugby.

I need not add that I shall be happy to give every aid and assistance in my power to the trustees and managers.

Sir, Leamington Hastings, Rugby, 18 March 1857.

I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 14th instant, and to convey to you the thanks of the committee of trustees and managers of the Rugby Savings Bank for the same, and for the tender of farther advice and assistance if required, and I am sorry to trespass again on your time so soon.

But the bond transmitted is not the last given by the late clerk; the sureties to that bond died, Mr. Samuel Nowell, May 15, 1822, and Mr. John Horn, March 10, 1837; and at a subsequent period there can be no doubt that Mr. George Harris, solicitor, of Rugby, joined Mr. Essex in a bond of 250 l. for the proper behaviour of the latter in the office of clerk to the Rugby Savings Bank, although no notice of such a bond is to be found in the minute-book of that institution.

As, when I was last with you, your clerk informed you that no other bond than the one of which you have transmitted me a copy would be found in your office, and as the bond of the present clerk was certainly transmitted to you in November last, it is possible a further search may be more successful than the former one; and as, by inadvertence, our own letters, &c., are frequently transmitted to Rugeley, I would suggest, that the documents in your office, if any, relating to that place, should be examined for the missing bonds.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter of the 18th instant.

A further very careful search has been made for the bond you suppose to have been given by Mr. George Harris, together with Mr. Essex, subsequently to the death of the sureties to the bond of which I send you a copy.

But no such bond is deposited in this office, nor can any trace be discovered of its having ever been lodged here. It appears also, from your letter, that no notice of such a bond can be found in the minute-book of the Rugby Savings Bank; and, under these circumstances, I am really led to conclude that, although it had been intended to take such further security from and for Mr. Essex, yet, from some cause or other, that intention was not carried into effect. What is certain is, that no trace of such a bond can be found in this department.

BOTH the sureties for the clerk of the Rugby Savings Bank, named in the copy of the bond you kindly sent us March 21st, having died many years ago, and a very strong impression still prevailing that other security was subsequently given (notwithstanding that no trace of it is to be found), and the probability of nothing being obtained by suit against the principal, other sources must be looked to for making up the deficiency found in the accounts. We are happy to say that a large portion of it has been subscribed, and that the remainder will be forthcoming as soon as we are able to give a satisfactory assurance that we have arrived at the full extent of our loss; and we shall be glad to be informed how we may invest it.

The depositors' books have been called in, and a very large number of them having been compared with the ledger, nothing of a suspicious character as regards them has yet appeared; and, indeed, the late clerk having discovered and most successfully practised a safer method of abstracting the monies of the bank, it is hardly to be expected that he should have resorted to an expedient more hazardous. He seems to have proceeded in this manner: first having filed a fictitious depositors' notice of withdrawal, he has presented it, when due, to the manager of the day, with a forged depositor's book, representing that the depositor had called before the bank was opened, and stated that he feared urgency of business might delay his return previous to its close, but that he should be much obliged if the cheque might be made out for him and left with the clerk. In many instances this request has been granted with too much facility. The whole proceeding has appeared regular in the day-book, ledger, and bank pass-books, and duly attested by the manager of the day; and has evaded detection, when the depositor's book has been brought into comparison with the ledger, by erasure of the fraudulent figures, which have been restored after such an examination (seldom occurring, and never without notice) has been over.

It is so far, however, satisfactory to us, that having obtained this clue to the frauds that have been perpetrated, we are able very nearly to account for the whole balance of 1,438*l.* found against us by Mr. Grey.

It has been thought proper to proceed criminally against the late clerk, and he stands committed for trial at the next assizes, but is out on bail. A little alarm has very naturally been excited in the minds of the depositors by the late disclosures; but an assurance having been given of their security, it seems as yet to have had little effect upon the amount either of deposits or withdrawals.

At a meeting of the trustees and superintending committee held this day, it has been explained by the actuary that frauds to the extent of 858*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* are supposed to have been committed by Mr. Thomas Underhill, the ledger-keeper; that sum having been withdrawn from the bank.

It is resolved that the business of the bank be continued, and that the affairs be investigated.

It is also resolved that a separate account be opened of all monies received by the bank from this date, as suggested by Mr. Tidd Pratt.

It is also resolved that Mr. George Grey, recommended by Mr. Higham, be appointed the accountant to examine and report on the accounts.

By direction of the general meeting,

West London Savings Bank, 27, Farringdon-street,
Sir, 23 April 1856.

I AM directed by the superintending committee of the West London Savings Bank to ask your advice and opinion on the following point:—

A large amount of deposits has been lately withdrawn from this bank, as you are aware, under the influence of an alarm excited by the knowledge that frauds have been committed, and that a deficiency exists in the funds of the institution.

I am happy to say, however, that confidence appears to have been in a great degree restored by the assurance published by the committee, that the deficiency shall occasion no loss to any depositor, and several have brought back and wished to deposit the whole amount withdrawn under the feeling of alarm. Where these withdrawals have exceeded 30*l.*, the committee have felt obliged, under the 29th section of the Act 3 Will. 4, c. 14, to decline to receive back more than 30*l.* from any depositor, and that only when no previous deposit had been made during the year.

Under the 39th section of the Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, certificates have been granted to several depositors, enabling them to re-invest their money with other savings banks; and the committee wish to know whether, under the particular circumstances of the case, this latter clause might not be construed to mean that they might themselves receive back the whole amount of the deposits withdrawn.

I have, &c.

THE Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt having had before them your secretary's letter of the 23d instant, stating that certificates have been granted to several depositors, enabling them to re-invest their money with other savings banks under the 39th section of the Act 9 Geo. 4, c. 92, and requesting to know whether the clause might not be construed to mean mean that the trustees themselves might receive back the whole amount of the deposits withdrawn, I am directed to acquaint you that, in the opinion of the Commissioners, the clause in question cannot in the least degree bear any such construction.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 8 November 1856.

REFERRING to the several communications which have taken place between you and this department on the subject of the misconduct and defalcation of your late actuary, and of his son, the ledger keeper, whereby a considerable amount, the property of depositors in your savings bank, was abstracted by these parties, I have now the honour to request that you will as soon as the savings bank year, ending 20th November, shall be closed, transmit to me, to be laid before the Commissioners, and to be deposited in this office, a copy of the report made upon the subject by the gentlemen selected by you to investigate the accounts of your savings bank, and into the whole matter connected with the defalcation of your late officers, together with a statement of the several steps which you have taken in reference thereto for preventing any fraud in future, and for replacing the amount which would otherwise have been lost to the depositors, who when they entrusted their savings to the custody of your savings bank, did so in the entire belief that by so doing they would be secure of the faithful repayment of their deposits in full, with the allotted interest thereon, whenever they should require such repayment to be made to them.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 27 January 1857.

THE period allowed by law for the preparation and delivery of the general annual statement from savings banks for the year ended 20th November 1856 expired on the 22d instant. Your general statement has not yet reached this office, nor have any of the returns which were required by the circular dated 31st October. Under these circumstances it is my duty to inquire what are the causes which delay the delivery of the annual statement, and of the other returns required. I shall be glad to receive this explanation as soon as possible.

Sir,

I AM directed by the trustees and managing committee of the West London Savings Bank to acknowledge the receipt of your two letters, of the 8th of November last and the 27th ultimo.

In reply to the latter I am to enclose to you the annual statement of the pecuniary state of the bank on the 20th of November last, together with the other returns required by your circular of the 31st of October last.

In reference to your former letter I am to send you copies of two reports made to the trustees, &c. by Mr. Grey, on his investigation of the books and accounts of the bank, after the discovery in January 1856 of the defalcation which had occurred.

West London.

These reports will sufficiently explain to you the state in which Mr. Grey found the affairs of the bank at that time.

Since completing that investigation Mr. Grey has had the accounts of the bank entirely in his own hands, as actuary pro tem., and under his directions precautions have been taken to guard against a repetition of fraud by a constant comparison of the ledgers with the cash-books; by a careful examination of every account on which a notice of withdrawal is given, whether of the whole or of part (the plans for defrauding this bank appearing in several cases to have been laid on the knowledge that if notice was given that the sum required was only part, the account would not be referred to before the repayment, but only the signature); and by a strict identification of the claimant before payment is made.

The committee of management continue carefully to examine the cash account every month, and to exercise as far as they can a supervision over the whole proceedings of the bank.

With respect to the annual statement now submitted, the committee have entrusted its preparation almost entirely to Mr. Grey, in whom they have great confidence; but they do not feel that they can certify to its absolute truth in the unqualified manner required by the certificate at the foot of that statement, which would seem to call for as minute an investigation on the part of those signing it as was made by professional accountants in the case of the recent frauds at their bank.

They have examined generally the manner in which Mr. Grey has arrived at his results. It is impossible for them, or any of them, to follow him in his details as to nearly 6000 depositors' accounts; but they believe him to be correct, and that is all to which they can certify. They have therefore introduced a few words to that effect in their certificate.

The annual statement will show that whilst the deficiency first reported by Mr. Grey was 1,553*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.*, it was reduced, up to the 20th November last, to 1,010*l.* 14*s.

I am also further to state that since the annual statement was closed, Mr. T. Underhill, the former ledger keeper of the bank (through whose dishonesty the defalcation has chiefly arisen), was lately killed on a railway, and an insurance on his life has become payable, out of which the managing committee have obtained 200*l.*

They have also received further contributions from trustees and managers towards the deficiency, amounting to nearly 100*l.*; promises have been given of about 200*l.* more, and others may be expected at the annual meeting.

They hope thus to be enabled shortly to reduce the deficiency to about 500*l.*, being little more than it had stood at for some years before the defalcation took place, arising from the expenses of building which had been incurred for the benefit of the bank.

This sum, I am to remind you, does not much exceed 1 ½*d.* in the pound on the amount in deposit; and there is reason to believe that there may be as much as 500*l.* among the deposits, which never will or never can be claimed.

Under the circumstances I have mentioned, I am to express the hope of the trustees and managing committee that you will consider that they have done and are doing all that can be expected of them towards securing the depositors from the effects of the frauds which have been practised on them.

I am, &c.

Secretary.

Sir Alexander Spearman, Bart.,

* The deficiency of 1,553*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.* was reduced before 20 November 1856 to 1,010*l.* 14*s.* principally by payments arising from the subscriptions of trustees and managers. It has since been reduced to 710*l.* 14*s.* by the further sum of 300*l.* paid to the National Debt Office, 200*l.* of which was recovered from the late Mr. Underhill's personal estate, and 100*l.* from further subscriptions of the trustees and managers. It is stated that further subscriptions are expected.

COPY of Mr. Grey's REPORT to the Trustees and Managers of the Farringdon Street Savings Bank, 15 January 1856.

Gentlemen, 48, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 15 January 1856.

IN pursuance of your instructions (conveyed to me by Mr. Smith), I have proceeded to investigate the accounts of your institution, with a view to ascertain what deficiency exists in the funds which have been deposited therein.

Having been informed that some fraudulent withdrawals have been obtained from the funds, by means either of fabricated books of deposit or by the improper use of mutilated books of closed accounts (five instances of such frauds having been called to my attention), I have thought it the best course to commence my examination with the means likely to bring me at once to these cases, and any others of a similar nature; and as it was intimated to me that the frauds are supposed to be confined to the last year's proceedings, I have thought it better to begin with comparing every withdrawal made during the past year, as shown by the managers' cash journal, confirmed by that of the actuary, with the posting of the same items in the ledger.

I have been surprised to find that no similar check has previously been made of the daily proceedings of the bank, but such is the case. There is no sign whatever that the ledger entries have ever been called over with the cash journal! The consequence is, that the ledgers are full of errors. I assume the cash-books to be right, because two are kept, and they are made to agree at the end of each day's proceedings; and the cash is balanced with the amount so agreed on. But in the uncorrected and imperfect manner in which the ledgers have been kept they cannot be right, and it is impossible that a correct general balance-sheet can be made from them. The five instances of frauds which have been pointed out to me (and of which there can be no doubt) constitute of themselves a deficiency of nearly 500*l.*, and, with a previous deficiency of more than 400*l.* shown by the last year's balance-sheet, make a total deficiency of about 900*l.*

But several other small payments have not been posted, whether with a fraudulent intention or not I cannot yet tell. I also find numerous small discrepancies between the sums paid and those posted in the ledgers, and there is an extraordinary irregularity in the dates of the ledger entries, as compared with the actual dates of the payments; the difference sometimes extending over several months.

With the ledgers in this state, with no means taken, during the week of notice, to ascertain that the sum claimed was really in the account; with payments made again on closed accounts, and others on open accounts which have never been posted, it is evident, not only that great dishonesty has been practised in your institution, but that there has been very culpable negligence and want of precaution throughout the proceedings; and it seems to me highly important that the investigation to be made should be of the most searching character; the manner in which the depositors' books have been tampered with making it absolutely necessary, in my opinion, that every depositor's book should be called in and compared with the books of the office; indeed, until this step has been taken I cannot undertake to give you a perfect account of the deficiency, or of the real state of the bank.

The secretary informs me that you wish to know what will be my charge for making this investigation. It is impossible to say how far it may be necessary to carry the inquiry in order to discover all the frauds that may have been practised. If they extend beyond the last year, I can give you no idea what the expense may amount to; but if the examination of one year's accounts should lead to an explanation of the deficiency, to within an amount which it would not be worth while to pursue, I can judge from the time and labour which it has cost me to examine other banks of a similar extent, that my charge for a thorough examination of the last year's proceedings of your institution, including a scrutiny of every item of receipt and expenditure of every depositor's balance in your books, an examination of every depositor's book that may be brought in, and a general investigation of the cash received and accounted for, will be not less than 50 l.; I will undertake it shall not exceed 60 l.

If you decide on employing me for this purpose, I must request to be favoured with your own written instructions to that effect.

COPY of Mr. Grey's SECOND REPORT to the Trustees and Managers of the Farringdon-street Savings Bank, 27 February 1856.

Gentlemen, 48, Lincoln's-Inn Fields, 27 February 1856.

WITH reference to my report of the 15th of January last on the accounts of the West London Savings Bank, I beg leave to remind you that I therein pointed out the necessity (as I deemed it) of calling in the depositors' pass-books, before a correct knowledge could be obtained of the present state of the bank. This has not been done; and in the absence of those books I can only report as to the state of the account, on the supposition that the ledgers are correct, and that cannot be at all relied on.

It is probable that in many cases of fraud the ledgers have been made to agree with the pass-books, because if this were not done the production of the pass-book would at any time lead to the exposure of the fraud; but where frauds are being practised in various ways, and at every opportunity (which I believe has been the case in this instance), it may not always be possible to take the precaution of making the books agree, and there can be no doubt that the production of the pass-book is the only real test of the accuracy of the ledger.

Assuming then for the moment that the ledgers are correct, the result of my investigation is, that on the 20th of November 1855 the liabilities of the bank, or the amount due to depositors, including all interest to that day, was 96,577 l. 14 s. 8 d.

The assets on the same day consisted of 94,106 l. 18 s. 3 d. invested with the National Debt Commissioners (including also the interest to that day), and 917 l. 13 s. in the hands of the treasurer, forming a total amount of assets of 95,024 l. 11 s. 3 d., and leaving a gross deficiency of 1,553 l. 3 s. 5 d., including that which was known to exist independently of any frauds; the precise amount of this admitted deficiency I have been unable clearly to ascertain.

In the annual statement made to the National Debt Office to the 20th November 1854, it was represented to be 413 l. 9 s. 4 d.

In the course of my examination I have ascertained beyond all doubt that the whole of the additional deficiency here stated has by no means arisen during the year ended the 20th of November 1855; but my investigation has, by your desire, been confined to that year.

In examining the receipts and payments of the past year, however, I have taken the opportunity to ascertain the balance with which each depositor's account commenced the year on the 20th of November 1854, and I find the aggregate amount of those balances very different from that with which the last year's annual statement is made to close.

The balances due to depositors on the 20th of November 1854 appear in the classified statement of that date as 98,597 l. 12 s. 5 d., but I make them amount to 99,164 l. 14 s. 5 d.; they were therefore stated at 567 l. 2 s. less than the truth. This reduction was accomplished by dropping 30 l., 40 l., or 50 l. each from some of the larger balances until the whole amount was brought down to the sum which (allowing for the known deficiency) would meet the assets in hand.

A number of other balances had also been similarly reduced by 30 l. each; but as this would have brought the amount too low, these have been restored to their real amount, and to the classes to which they properly belong; but the changes from one class to the other are quite apparent in the balance-book, and the motive for these changes is quite unmistakeable.

So far as I can make out from the aggregate of the ledger balances, as given above, the deficiency on the 20th of November 1854 was 980 l. 11 s. 4 d., instead of

Digitized by Google

of 413*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*, which was then represented as the whole deficiency, and was accounted for as having been spent in the management of the bank.

It is evident, therefore, that the frauds by which the funds of the bank have been reduced commenced prior to the 20th of November 1854; how long previously, or in what manner they have been practised, it is impossible to say without pursuing the inquiry to its source, or to the period when the whole deficiency can be satisfactorily shown to have been expended in management.

In my former report I have referred to five cases in which sums varying from 60*l.* to 178*l.* have been fraudulently withdrawn from the bank by persons not entitled to receive them; it is quite evident that this must have been done in collusion with some officer of the institution.

I find only one other instance in the last year's account of an apparently similar fraud, and that is for 18*l.*; but I find one sum of 30*l.* and 15 other smaller sums, amounting together to 22*l.* 14*s.* 5*d.*, entered in the ledger to the credit of different accounts, which sums do not appear in the managers' receiving book, the cash for which, therefore, has never come into the funds of the bank.

It would appear that these sums must have been received by the person who entered them in the ledger, and who no doubt entered them in the depositors' books, and that he has appropriated the money to his own use on occasions when no manager was present; and this course of proceeding may have been carried on for a long time previously, whenever opportunity has offered.

For the discovery of frauds like these, and for ascertaining the actual amount of them, I see no other alternative than to trace them back to their origin in the books of the bank, or to call in the depositors' books.

The appearance of the ledgers by no means gives an idea of their incorrectness; they are written in a remarkably neat and businesslike manner, but left, as they have been, entirely without any check or comparison with the cash-books, they are, as might be expected, full of uncorrected errors, independent of the fraudulent discrepancies; and the scattered manner in which about 5,000 open accounts are mixed with more than 18,000 closed ones, in 12 large volumes, instead of being condensed, as is usual, into three or four, has rendered the investigation a very laborious one.

The greatest pains have been taken, however, of which the time has admitted to correct every error that could be discovered, and to prepare an accurate classification of the balances due on the 20th November 1855.

The managers' cash-books, the bankers' pass-book, the certificates from the National Debt Office as to money invested and interest accumulated, showing also the amount remaining in the hands of the Government, the account of interest allowed to depositors at the end of the year, and the account of expenses of management, have all been carefully examined, and have enabled me to prepare the annual statement for the National Debt Office to the 20th November 1855, which I herewith enclose.

That statement necessarily contains a rectification of the false account of liabilities contained in the statement of the preceding year, and shows the real amount of the deficiency on the 20th of November 1855 so far as, under the circumstances of the case, it has been possible to ascertain it. It ought, perhaps, to be mentioned that the present deficiency is increased to the extent of 33*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* by the excess of the expenses of the bank for the past year beyond the amount of the income arising from the difference between the interest obtained from the National Debt Office and that allowed to the depositors.

I think, gentlemen, you may congratulate yourselves that the deficiency is not greater than it appears to be; with the opportunities which have been afforded, and with so large a fund to work on, a great deal more mischief might as easily have been done: that which has been accomplished is not irremediable.

Gentlemen, National Debt Office, 28 November 1856.

REFERRING to the communications (verbal) made to this department relative to the defalcation of your late actuary, whereby a considerable deficiency has arisen in the funds of your savings bank, and having been also informed that an investigation is taking place into the accounts of the bank, I have now the honour to request that you will, so soon as that investigation shall have been completed, transmit to me, to be laid before the Commissioners, and to be deposited in this office, a copy of the report of the gentleman appointed by you to conduct it, together with a statement of all the circumstances of the case, and that you will also inform me what steps you may have taken or have in contemplation to guard against the commission of fraud in future, and for replacing the amount abstracted, so as to secure to the depositors payment in full of the sums of money entrusted to your keeping.

Sir, Bromley Savings Bank, 27 January 1857.

I AM desired by the trustees of the Bromley Savings Bank to reply to your letter of the 28th of November last, requesting to be informed of the results of an investigation then taking place into the accounts of the bank, in consequence of the frauds committed by the late actuary; and I am to inform you that the total loss amounts to 931 l. 16 s. 3 d. Of that amount the sum of 458 l. 1 s. 2 d. was taken from the treasurer's balance, and has been already provided for, 408 l. 1 s. 2 d. having been repaid by the treasurer, and 50 l. by Thomas Campling's securities. Of the remaining 473 l. 18 s. 3 d. the sum of 255 l. 15 s. 3 d. has been decided by Mr. Tidd Pratt to have been deposited according to the rules of the institution; but 218 l. was paid informally.

A subscription has been entered into in the neighbourhood, which is now in course of payment, and the whole of the above amount, 473 l. 18 s. 3 d., will be made good immediately.

To guard as much as possible against frauds in future, the revision of the rules had engaged the attention of a committee of managers appointed for that purpose; but on submitting the amended regulations to Mr. Tidd Pratt, he suggested that any contemplated alterations should be delayed for the present, in anticipation of a Government measure on the subject of savings banks.

Savings Bank, Gallowtree-gate, Leicester,
3 January 1857.

Gentlemen,

I AM desired, as the chairman of the superintending committee of the Leicester Savings Bank, to inform you that in consequence of the death of the late secretary, Mr. William Cooke, it has been deemed expedient to engage the services of an experienced accountant to examine the books; that he has for three or four weeks past been busily engaged going through them; and in consequence of delays arising therefrom, they will be unable to furnish the annual balance-sheet, &c. &c. to your office within the time allowed for this purpose.

They hope, therefore, that you will kindly extend the time for one month longer; and they will feel obliged by a reply at your earliest convenience.

On behalf of the superintending committee of management,

Sir, National Debt Office, 5 January 1857.

I HAVE had the honour to receive your letter of the 3d instant.

Under the circumstances stated in that letter, and in the personal communication which I had the honour to have with you a few days previously, I beg leave to acquaint you that this department will be quite prepared not to press for the delivery of the annual general statement until the trustees and managers shall have been able fully to investigate all the accounts and all the circumstances which have been disclosed upon the death of the late secretary.

The Commissioners will be glad to receive with the general statement, when it is transmitted, a full report upon the whole matter.

Sir, Leicester, 29 January 1857.

I HAVE the honour of receiving your letter of the 27th instant, inquiring why the usual annual returns from the Leicester Savings Bank for the year ending the 20th November 1856 have not been duly forwarded to your office within the prescribed time, which expired on 22d instant; and in reply thereto I beg to refer you to your letter to me, dated the 3d instant, in which you extended the time for the trustees making the returns in question to one month from the 22d instant, for the reasons which were there stated, namely, the death of the late secretary, and the consequent thorough investigation which it was found quite necessary should be made into the whole of the accounts; and the trustees, feeling the importance of this being thoroughly done, will lose no time in the matter; but from inquiries made to-day from the accountant employed by the executors of the late secretary, I am fearful that the full time at first granted by you will be required before the returns will be ready, as the party just referred to names the 9th February as the very earliest day by which he shall have completed his task, when his results will (of course) have to be compared with the statement already prepared by the professional accountant employed by the trustees of the bank.

These causes for the delay will, I trust, be so far satisfactory to you. Under the peculiar circumstances, I am desired to ask whether it will be necessary to classify the sums due to depositors as heretofore, or may they be rendered in one amount? If it be indispensable to comply with the printed form, the accounts will have to be abstracted again for this purpose.

THE account which is most pressingly required at this moment is that which is wanted to complete the Order of the House of Commons of July last year. I enclose another blank form to be filled up in case the former has been mislaid, and I hope the return may be speedily forwarded to me.

With respect to the general statement, time must undoubtedly be allowed, to any extent required, for the thorough investigation of the whole of the accounts, under the particular circumstances in which the bank is placed; because it appears to be altogether indispensable that a thorough and searching examination should be made, for the satisfaction of the trustees and managers, and for the security of the depositors. I am afraid, however, that when the trustees and managers shall find themselves enabled to transmit the general statement it will not be possible for this department to dispense with the usual detailed classification of the depositors' accounts.

Gentlemen,

WILL you have the kindness to send down two blank forms of annual statement; they are required because those you have previously furnished for the last year have been erroneously made out.

The accountant employed on behalf of the late secretary's executors having met with an accident, ten days back, which has confined him to his bed, is the reason why the statement has not been forwarded, as it was thought and hoped it would have been, this week. It is a matter of great regret and annoyance it has not been sent, but as soon as it can be accomplished it certainly will be. I am desired to say thus much by way of explanation.

Sir, 8 April 1857.

In answer to your letter of yesterday, addressed to the trustees of the savings bank, I beg to inform you that a meeting of the superintending committee will be held at the latter end of next week, when your letter shall be laid before them. As secretary I can take upon myself to assure you that the delay in making up and forwarding the annual statement to November last is a source of great annoyance to the trustees; they have urged forward the settlement with the executors of the late Mr. Cooke as much as possible, but difficulties over which they have had no control whatever have arisen to prevent a complete adjustment of the accounts.

I have, &c.
James Higham, Esq., (signed) Arthur Malin, Secretary.
National Debt Office, London.

Savings Bank, Gallowtree-gate, Leicester,
Gentlemen, 25 April 1857.

I beg to inform you that a meeting of the superintending committee of this bank was held yesterday, at which it was decided that the annual statement of accounts up to 20th November last should be furnished to your office forthwith, and in accordance with those instructions it shall leave here not later than Tuesday next.

I have, &c.
To the Commissioners for the (signed) Arthur Malin.
Reduction of the National Debt, London.

Leicester, 28 April 1857.

The undersigned, secretary and accountant of the Leicester Savings Bank, have to report that the defalcation of 688 l. 16*s.* 11*d. is attributable, as far as they have been able to ascertain, mainly to fraudulent entries made in the cash-books and ledgers of the bank by Edward Webb Austin, a clerk employed by the late secretary, Mr. William Cooke, and that these fraudulent entries have chiefly occurred within the year ending the 20th November last, and in the following manner: No current accounts were tampered with, but on the closing of an account by the depositor tens were placed before the units on the credit side of the cash-book, the ledger made to correspond, and the cash paid over to the treasurer pro tanto diminished.

For example: if a depositor, whose account amounted to 5 l., withdrew it, a "6" was placed before the "5" in the cash-book, and 60 l. therefore at the same time abstracted from the cash. The ledger was in like manner made to correspond; and in order to render detection less palpable, the same figures or erasures were carried through the whole of the preceding annual balances to the top of the folio, thus rendering an examination of several years necessary.

It will be seen, therefore, that only closed accounts being tampered with, no periodical check could occur by the production of the depositors' books.

The balance at the close of the year was made to show a reasonable surplus, by the omission from the list of such a number of accounts owing to depositors as would be necessary to produce such surplus.

In

Leicester.

In several instances balances due to depositors were entered a second time as paid; that is to say, the depositor having received his money and left his pass-book with the secretary, the pass-book was, after the expiration of two or three weeks, again laid before another manager, and the amount so paid a second time, and credited in the cash-book, went of course into the clerk's pocket.

Every exertion has been made by the trustees and managers to get in the depositors' books for verification, but as yet 500 out of 2,545 have not been presented, and until all shall have been examined the audit cannot be said to be perfect; nevertheless there is every reason to believe that the books now remaining out will not materially affect the present balance.

The Seamen's Savings Bank.

General.

299. With a view of inducing provident habits in the seamen and their families, and of providing for the safe custody and increase of their savings, the Legislature has empowered the Board of Trade to establish savings banks at such places within the United Kingdom as may appear to be expedient for the benefit of seamen belonging to Her Majesty's Navy, the mercantile marine, or any other sea service, as well as for their wives and families, the management and control of these banks being vested in the Board of Trade. Under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping and Seamen's Savings Bank Acts, a department has been established in London, at the Board of Trade, as the Central Savings Bank, where all accounts of the depositors will be kept. The shipping masters at the several ports are to act as its agents, to receive and to pay deposits.

Object of the Banks.

Powers of Board of Trade.

Mode of conducting the business.

300. The shipping master is to take every precaution to confine the benefits of the Seamen's Savings Bank to "seamen," their "wives," "widows," and "children"; he is, therefore, not to receive deposits from any person who does not belong to the class described, and should he discover that deposits have been inadvertently received from persons of any other class, he is to communicate the particulars to the Board of Trade immediately, and await instructions as to the course he is to pursue.

The benefits of the Bank to be limited to seamen and certain of their relatives.

301. Shipping masters are to take all means in their power to make the advantages of the savings bank known to the seamen who are discharged and paid off before them, and to seamen, their wives and families who may reside within the district of the shipping offices; for this purpose, posters and small handbills will be supplied to the several shipping masters for gratuitous distribution. The posters should be placed outside as well as inside the shipping offices.

The advantages of the system to be made known.

302. Deposits may be received at any port or ports, except as hereafter mentioned, and the whole or any part of any sum for the time being standing to the credit of any account may be withdrawn at any port or ports, without reference to the port or ports at which the deposits have been made. No deposits are, however, to be received or paid at the ports of Kirkwall, Lerwick, and Stornoway, owing to the uncertainty attending the postal delivery to and from these ports, nor at any of the sub-ports or creeks in any port in the United Kingdom.

Where deposits may be received and paid.

303. No payment is to be made in any case without an order from the Board of Trade.

All payments to be authorised.

304. Sums not less than 5 s. and not exceeding 200 l. in the whole, for any one account, may be received as deposits.

Extent of deposits.

305. Interest will be computed yearly, and the rate of 3 l. per cent. per annum will be allowed to depositors on every pound deposited up to 200 l., but no interest will be allowed for any sum less than 20 s., nor for any period shorter than a calendar month, reckoning from the 20th. According to the rule of the National Debt Office, interest commences from the 20th of each month; consequently, if money is paid in on any day of the month except the 20th, no interest will begin to accrue until the next following 20th day of a month.

Rate of interest.

306. When the principal and accumulated interest on 200 l. amount collectively to 250 l., no further interest will be payable.

Interest limited.

307. The shipping master is, in all cases, to require persons who may transact any business connected with the Seamen's Savings Bank, where signatures are necessary, to sign their names, if they can write, and are not incapacitated

Persons when able are to sign their names, instead of making their marks.

Digitized by Google

incapacitated by injury or bodily infirmity from so doing, as the signatures may be useful at a future period, in assisting to establish identity of the person in case of any doubt. If they cannot write they must make their mark, which must be witnessed by some person, as pointed out on the forms.

No information to be given to strangers respecting any account.

308. The shipping master is not to disclose to any person the amount of a depositor's balance, nor the amount of any deposit made, nor the amount of any withdrawal for which notice may have been given.

Mode of identifying accounts of depositors.

309. As depositors are allowed to pay or withdraw the whole or any part of their deposits at any of the ports that may be most convenient to them, excepting at those ports referred to in par. 302, it will be necessary, for the sake of a ready reference, that each account be identified by a number, a series of which will be allotted by the Board of Trade to each port (see par. 310). The shipping master is requested, in all his communications with the Board of Trade, on the subject of a depositor's account, to quote the number, which will be found in the depositor's pass-book, as well as the surname of the depositor.

Depositors' Pass-books.

Pass-book to be given to a depositor on opening an account.

310. The mode of allotting a series of numbers to the several ports (as referred to in the former paragraph) will be by the Board of Trade transmitting to the shipping master, on his application, a supply of small books, called "pass-books"; one of these books is to be delivered to every depositor on opening an account in the Seamen's Savings Bank. Each book will have a distinct number, and it will be by this number, together with the name, that the depositor's account will be identified at the Board of Trade. When a joint account is opened, the "pass-book" may be given to any one of the partners in the account.

When "pass-books" are to be presented to shipping master.

311. The "pass-book" must be presented to the shipping master, whenever a depositor wishes to make an additional deposit to, or withdraw a part of, his account in the Seamen's Savings Bank (see pars. 318 and 326), also whenever a depositor desires to transfer his account to a relative (see par. 324). Entries of the receipt and payment of deposits are to be made by the shipping master in the following manner. See also pars. 321 and 331.

Mode of making entries therein.

Course to be pursued if a depositor loses his pass-book.

312. In case a depositor loses his pass-book he is to state the circumstances attending its loss, in writing, to the shipping master, who is to endorse upon the letter the descriptive particulars of the depositor, as required by Form XY. and add such remarks as he may consider necessary previous to transmitting the application to the Board of Trade. If the Board of Trade are satisfied of the identity of the applicant, a duplicate pass-book will be sent to the shipping master for issue to the depositor, on payment of a sum of two shillings and sixpence. The receipt of this sum is to be accounted for under Schedule 4.

Receipt

Receipt of Deposits.

313. Accounts may be opened as follows:— Persons by whom, and method in which, accounts may be opened.

By a seaman,—

1. In his own name.
2. In the separate names of his wife or of each or any of his children.
3. In the joint names of himself and his wife, or himself and each or any of his children.

By the wife or widow of a seaman,—

1. In her own name.
2. In the joint names of herself and of each or any of her children.

By the child of a seaman,—

1. In his or her own name, if above 14 years of age.

Note.—If the child is under 14 years of age the account must be opened by one of the parents of the child, unless special sanction is obtained from the Board of Trade to the contrary. (See also par. 322.)

314. When any persons of the above-named classes apply to the shipping master to open an account in the Seamen's Savings Bank, the shipping master is to ascertain in what manner the applicant wishes the account to be opened, and according to the reply received he is to request the applicant to read the declaration suited to the case required to be made in Form XY, and must explain to the applicant that a false declaration will risk the loss of all sums now or hereafter deposited by the applicant in any savings bank in the United Kingdom. Shipping master to ascertain how the account is to be opened. To explain the penalty attending a false declaration.

315. If the applicant states, after the nature of the declaration has been explained by the shipping master, that he or she has no account in the Seamen's or in any other Savings Bank in the United Kingdom, the shipping master is to fill up the Form XY, with the descriptive particulars of the applicant, and declaration suited to the case, which the applicant is to sign in the shipping master's presence. Descriptive particulars of applicant to be given.

316. In cases where a joint account is opened, or where a first deposit is made by a seaman on behalf of and for the sole use of his wife or child, the particulars respecting the wife or child are to be given, in addition to the descriptive particulars of the seaman. (See Form XY.) In certain cases the descriptive particulars of the seaman's relative to be given.

317. The shipping master may then receive the deposit, and is to enter the amount, with other particulars, in the Schedule 19 (Receipts). This entry is to be verified by the signatures of the depositor and a witness. Before delivering the pass-book to the depositor, the number of the book is to be written on the top of the Form XY. An entry of the sum received is to be made in the pass-book and initialed by the shipping master, the surname of the depositor or person for whom the account is opened, being written therein and also upon the cover. The Christian name is not to be written. The shipping master must be very particular in ascertaining that the surname of the depositor in the pass-book, and in Schedule 19, is correctly spelt, as much trouble will be caused hereafter, if sufficient attention is not paid to this regulation. Receipt of deposit to be entered in Schedule 19. No. of pass-book to be written in XY. Surname only of owner and amount of deposit to be entered in pass-book.

318. The shipping master is in no case to receive a deposit, without entering it in the pass-book, and initialing the entry. If therefore the pass-book is not produced when the depositor wishes to make a further payment, the money cannot be received. Additional deposits not to be received without production of the pass-book.

319. No new account is to be opened without the attendance of the person in whose name the account is to stand, except only when a seaman desires to open an account in the separate name, and for the sole benefit, of his wife or one of his children, when the personal attendance of the wife or child at the shipping office may be dispensed with, if the particulars respecting them required by Form XY, for the purpose of their identification hereafter, can be given by the Seaman. If they happen to be present, they should be required to sign the Form XY. Depositors to attend personally to open a new account. Exceptions to the above rule.

Digitized by Google

Joint accounts may be opened by one person.

320. If the account is to be opened as a joint account, the attendance of one of the parties will be sufficient to sign the declaration on Form XY, if the required descriptive particulars of the absent partner can be given by the depositor. If, however, all the partners in the account are present, they should be requested to sign their names to the declaration in Form XY.

Additional deposits may be made by proxy.

321. Where an account has been already opened, and an additional deposit is desired to be made, the shipping master may receive the amount without requiring the personal attendance of the depositor, provided the pass-book be produced to the shipping master to have the sum entered therein (see pars. 311 and 318). When an additional deposit is received the shipping master, after entering it in the pass-book, is to draw a line and add it to the amount already standing to the depositor's credit (see par. 311).

Children's deposits.

322. No account is to be opened by a child under 14 years of age (see par. 313); but if an account has been opened by the parent for the benefit of a child under this age, subsequent deposits may be received from or on account of children in the usual way, to be placed to the credit of the child's account. A child, if not under 14 years of age, will be allowed to withdraw deposits standing to the credit of his or her account in the same manner as other depositors.

Transfer of Deposits.

Depositor and transferee to attend at the shipping office.

323. It may frequently happen that a seaman on shipping for a fresh voyage, will wish to transfer the control of his account in the Seamen's Savings Bank to his wife or child. When an application of this nature is made to the shipping master, he is to require the attendance of the depositor and transferee to sign the Form XX.

The application, together with the pass-book, to be forwarded to the Board of Trade.

324. When the authority and declaration has been signed, the Form XX, together with the pass-book, is to be forwarded to the Board of Trade for the purpose of having the transfer registered. The pass-book will be returned to the shipping master by post, for delivery to the transferee, who should be directed to apply for it at the shipping office in a few days' time.

Transfer of right in a joint account.

325. If a joint account has been opened, and one of the partners wish to transfer his or her right in favour of the other partner in the account, a similar course is to be pursued.

Notice for withdrawal of Deposits.

Depositor to attend personally with his pass-book to give notice for withdrawal.

326. When a depositor requires the repayment of the whole or any portion of the sum standing to the credit of his account in the Seamen's Savings Bank, he must attend at some shipping office with his pass-book, and satisfy the shipping master that he is its owner. The shipping master is then to fill up the notice for withdrawal of money contained in the first part of the Form XW, to which the depositor must sign his name. This signature is to be witnessed by some person other than the shipping master. If the depositor is intoxicated the shipping master is not to allow him to give the notice for withdrawal.

The notice and pass-book to be sent to the Board of Trade.

327. The shipping master is to forward the application and the pass-book the same day to the Board of Trade, and if the claim is correct, an authority for payment will be sent by return of post. Where the postal deliveries in London are made on the next day morning, the authority for payment will be transmitted so that payment may be made on the third day from the date of the application, but the number of days will be uncertain according to the time occupied in transmitting the papers through the post, and the applicant must be informed accordingly when to apply for payment.

All partners in a joint account to sign notice and receipt, or give written authority to another.

328. When a withdrawal is required from a joint account, all the partners in the account must attend together at the shipping office to sign the notice and receipt, unless a written authority is given by those of the partners in the account who cannot attend, empowering one of the other partners to give the notice for, or receive the amount of the withdrawal, in which case the signature of the person so authorised will be sufficient, if the Board of Trade is satisfied of

of the identity of those partners in the account who cannot attend at the shipping office. The written authority should be according to the following form, and must be witnessed by some person of respectability, whose address and occupation is to be stated.

329. The claimant is in all cases required to attend personally at the shipping office to give notice for withdrawal, and to receive the money, unless incapacitated from doing so by illness. In such cases, written notices may be sent to the shipping master, who, before forwarding them to the Board of Trade, will make the necessary inquiries with a view to prevent fraud. If a written notice is sent, the shipping master is to attach it to a Form XW, and transmit it with the pass-book to the Board of Trade in due course.

Notices in certain cases may be given in writing.

Repayments of Deposits.

330. When a person applies for payment of a withdrawal that has been authorised by the Board of Trade, the shipping master, for the purpose of the identification of the claimant, is to require him to state his name, number of pass-book, and amount of withdrawal claimed. If the replies are satisfactory, and the claimant is not intoxicated, the shipping master should require him to sign the receipt at the foot of Form XW, which signature must be compared with that to the notice for withdrawal on the same form.

Inquiries to be made of persons who apply for the payment of withdrawals.

331. If he is satisfied of the identity of the applicant, the shipping master is to pay the money, to enter the payment in the seaman's pass-book, initial the entry, and deduct the payment from the balance standing to the depositor's credit, see par. 311, and to return the pass-book to the claimant. The payment is then to be recorded in Schedule 20 (payments).

Entries of payment to be made in the pass-book and in Schedule 20.

332. Should the signature at foot of the notice for withdrawal not fully establish the identity of the claimant to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade, or in case the claimant cannot write, an order for payment will be transmitted to the shipping master, but the descriptive particulars of the claimant will be endorsed on the order, to enable the shipping master to satisfy himself fully of the identity of the claimant before paying the money.

Guide for the shipping master in cases of doubtful identity.

333. If the claimant's identity is not fully established by the descriptive particulars endorsed on the order, and the shipping master has reason to believe that the person applying for payment is not the proper claimant, he is not to pay the money, nor return the pass-book, but is to communicate the circumstances to the Board of Trade immediately, and await further instructions.

Payment not to be made if the identity is doubtful.

Accounts.

334. At the close of the day (or before if the business of the shipping office will permit), the shipping master is to enter the particulars of Schedules 19 and 20 into the schedule books provided for that purpose, and is to transmit, by the same day's post, the Schedules 19 and 20, with all documents relating thereto, to the Board of Trade; if there has been no transaction of receipt or payment during the day, "nil" Schedules are not to be forwarded.

Schedules 19 and 20 to be copied into Schedule Books.

335. To

* The words between [ ] are to be added or omitted as the case may require.

Documents to be attached to Schedules 19 and 20.

335. To Schedule 19 are to be attached, by means of a cord or string, the declarations on Form XY. for opening new accounts; and to Schedule 20 are to be attached, in like manner, the receipts for withdrawals on Form XW.

Total receipts and payments to be included in account current.

336. At the end of the month or quarter (as the case may be), the shipping master is to include in the Accounts current which he renders to the Board of Trade, the total amounts of the receipts and payments on account of the Savings Banks. These totals must agree with the summaries of Schedules 19 and 20, which are to be transmitted with the other Schedules at the expiration of the month or quarter.

Miscellaneous.

When the business of the Banks is to commence.

337. The business of the Seamen's Savings Bank is to commence on the 1st October 1856, from which time deposits are to be received and paid at the several shipping offices under the rules laid down.

Mode of transmitting applications.

338. Applications for withdrawals, or transfers, are to be folded up and placed in the pockets of the pass-books previous to their transmission to the Board of Trade.

Shipping master not to delay applying for an imprest.

339. When notices of withdrawal of deposits from the Seamen's Savings Banks are given by depositors, and the shipping master has not sufficient funds in his hands to meet the payments, he is to apply for an imprest immediately on Form XA, as pointed out by the 268th paragraph of the original instructions, so that the depositors may not be inconvenienced by any unnecessary delay.

Remittances to be forwarded if he has more funds than he requires.

340. Should the shipping master find that his receipts exceed his payments and liabilities, he is to forward a remittance to Her Majesty's Paymaster-General, as pointed out by the original instructions, after retaining a small sum in hand to meet unexpected demands. Notice, on Form XB, is to be given immediately on making the remittance.

The system of the "Seamen's Savings Bank" to be adopted at the Sailors' Homes used as shipping offices.

341. At those sailors' homes which are used as shipping offices the system of Savings Bank established under the Seamen's Savings Bank Act is to be adopted. As it is obvious that the cotemporaneous operation of two distinct systems of Savings Banks for seamen in one establishment would lead to much confusion, the best arrangement that can be made with regard to the "Savings" or "Deposit Accounts" now opened at the Home appears to be, that as soon as the several depositors return, they should be requested to transfer their deposits to the "Seaman's Savings Bank," under the control of the Board of Trade. Each seaman on the transfer being made must sign the declaration on Form XY.; the deposit accounts at the Home would thus by degrees become closed, and the seamen would be afforded the facility of withdrawing any portion of their deposits at any of the other ports in the United Kingdom.

Deposits may be received at Sailors' Homes which are not shipping offices.

342. As it is most desirable for the benefit of the seamen that only one system of savings banks for seamen should be established, the Board of Trade are willing to allow sums to be received as deposits from seamen at those sailors' homes in which shipping offices are not yet established. The superintendents or other officers of the homes who may be appointed by the committee to receive the deposits are to be guided by the rules laid down for the observance of the shipping masters. The account of receipts on schedule 19, together with the declarations on form XY, are to be transmitted by them to the Board of Trade daily (see par. 334), and remittances of the sums received on deposit are to be made by a letter of credit on a London banker, twice in each week to Her Majesty's Paymaster-General, Whitehall, London, to be placed to the account of the Mercantile Marine Fund, and advices of the remittances are to be sent immediately to the Board of Trade. When depositors require the repayment of the whole or any part of their deposits, the superintendents are to refer them to the shipping masters at the ports, who are at present the only officers at the ports authorised to make payments on account of the Board of Trade, and who will receive from the depositors the notices of the withdrawal, and and pay the money when authorised by the Board of Trade. The superintendents are to apply to the Board of Trade for a supply of "pass-books," and to the shipping masters when they require a supply of forms. The only forms they will require are as follows:

XB. Notices of remittance.
XY. Declarations on opening an account.
Schedule 19. Receipts of Deposits.
Summary of Schedule 19.

Depositors who may become insane, &c.

343. In case any depositor in the Seamen's Savings Bank shall become insane or otherwise incapacitated to act from illness or any other cause, the Board of Trade may, if the same is proved to its satisfaction by medical or other certificates, and by the report of a shipping master, authorise, if satisfied of the necessity of the case, the payment of such weekly sum for the care, maintenance or medical attendance of such depositor, as it may think fair and reasonable, and may also make such other payments on account of such depositor as the urgency of the case may appear to require; all such weekly or other payments shall be made out of the monies standing in the name of, or belonging to such depositor, on the receipt of the person to whom such payment shall have been directed to be made.

Application of deposits of deceased depositor.

344. Any money in the Seamen's Savings Bank that may be due to the estate of any deceased depositor, will be paid and applied by the Board of Trade under the same rules and regulations which govern the payment of the "Wages and effects of a deceased seaman."

If a seaman dies on board ship.

345. If a seaman who has died on board ship has, at the time of his death, a balance standing to the credit of his account in the Seamen's Savings Bank, the person who sends in a claim to the shipping master as the legal representative or next of kin to the deceased, is to transmit therewith the deceased depositor's pass book, if the claimant has it in his possession.

If a depositor dies on shore, burial certificate required.

346. With respect to seamen or other depositors who die on shore, the legal representative or next of kin is to send in a claim on form "NN," or "OO," in the usual way, together with the pass-book and burial certificate of the deceased, in addition to the other certificates required by the form of claim.

Books and Forms.

Pass-books issued by the Board of Trade.

347. The pass-books to be given to depositors when they make their first deposit will be supplied by the Board of Trade upon application.

Other books and forms supplied by the Queen's Printers.

The following books and forms will be supplied in the usual way by the Queen's Printers, on application by the shipping masters.
